C.I.O. Threatens To Call a Strike In Armour Plants

Vote To Tie Up Large Chicago Meat Concern

ASK CONFERENCE ON WORKING AGREEMENTS

Swift, Cudahy and Wilson Employes May Also Take Strike Vote

Chicago, July 16. (AP)—Representatives of the Packinghouse workers organizing committee voted today to call a strike at 17 plants of Armour & Company if the big packing firm declined to negotiate contracts with the CIO union.

Delegates to the national policy convention of the PWOC adopted a resolution authorizing officers of the group and bargaining committees at the various Armour plants, where the CIO claims a majority of the workers, to sponsor a walkout if they fail to arrange a conference on working agreements.

They also voted to request President Roosevelt to ask Armour & Company to enter negotiations with the PWOC.

Authorize Strike

The delegates likewise empowered PWOC officials to "declare strikes where necessary" in the plants of the other members of the "Big Four" packing concerns—Wilson, Swift & Cudahy—if they "persist in the same attitude and fail to negotiate."

Van A. Bittner, PWOC chairman, told reporters that, if the CIO's threat and the appeal for presidential intervention failed to bring about contract conferences, the only alternative was a strike.

He said the final decisions would be made by PWOC officials and national bargaining committees representing members employed by Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Wilson. No deadline was fixed.

Delegates in Accord

Strike action against independent packers also was approved unanimously by 856 delegates from 45 districts. Don Harris, National director, said they represented 78,000.

White House Has Congress Guessing Appointment of McNutt Seen by Some as Harmony Move

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 16. (AP)—Congress turned into what may be the adjournment home stretch this week with politicians puzzling over the meaning of several recent White House moves that seemed party race gestures rather than fore-runners of Democratic party strife.

The transfer of Paul C. McNutt of Indiana from the Philippine commission to the post of Federal Security administrator had about it a 1940 party harmony hint to some Democrats in Congress who have been at odds with the president.

The marked silence of some of the more belligerent New Deal elements of the administration over McNutt's elevation was noted. It contrasted with hints from home Democratic insurgents against Roosevelt leadership that McNutt might prove an acceptable harmony candidate for 1940.

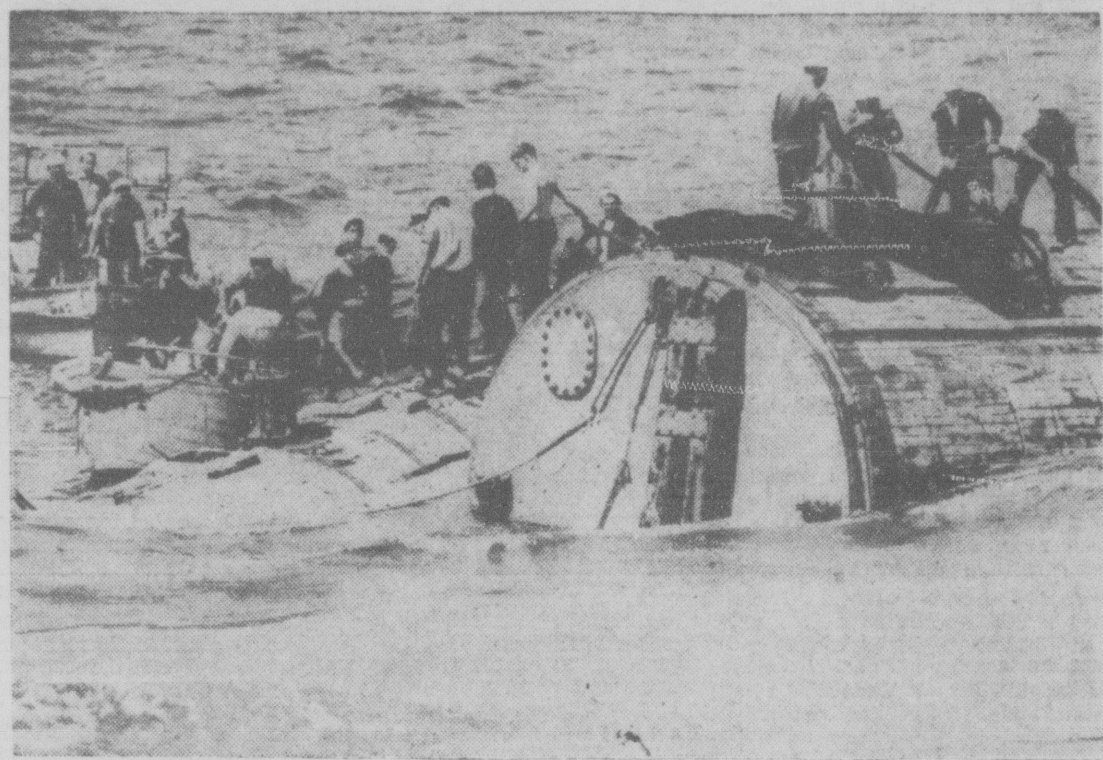

On top of that, President Roosevelt's neutrality message proved so mild in tone and substance that it surprised those who looked for something far different.

There was still another factor in last week's happenings in Washington that could be included as significant. The president spoke out sharply in the WPA situation to say there could be "no strike" against the government.

That is not a new conception, nor does it represent any change of front by the administration. But it does serve to recall that lack of a similarly firm expression by the administration against the sit-down strike, now outlawed by Supreme Court action, helped promote party discord.

Congress is moving toward adjournment and 1940 re-nomination and the WPA prevailing wage restoration dispute clouds the future for many a sitting member. Unless it is disposed of in some way before adjournment, reaction of the labor union vote at home may raise serious personal problems for many "party" members of the House, and some of the more than 30 senators intending to seek re-election.

Navy Continues Efforts To Raise Squalus

Navy salvage experts clear the lines and inspect pontoons for damage after their first attempt to raise the Squalus off Portsmouth, N. H., ended in spectacular failure. They had planned to raise the ill-fated submarine about 85 feet above the bottom, and tow it to shallow water, but pontoon chains broke and the submarine again sank to the bottom with its 26 dead.

Sen. Gillette In Favor of Embargo On Arms for Japs

Iowan Says He Is "Inclined" To Support Pittman Bill

Washington, July 16. (AP)—Sponsors of a resolution to restrict the export of war materials to Japan won backing today from Senator Gillette (D-Iowa), who joined the majority when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 12 to 11 last week to postpone consideration of neutrality legislation.

Gillette said he thought the Japanese embargo resolution should be considered on an entirely different basis from the general question of neutrality.

"In considering the proposed resolutions in the neutrality act," Gillette said, "we would be dealing with nations which have friendly relations with us, but in the Pittman resolution, if it has any basis at all, we would be dealing with a flagrant violator of treaties."

Gives President Power

The resolution embodying the proposed embargo, introduced by Senator Pittman (D-Nev.), would give the president power to restrict or cut off the export of certain war supplies to any nation who has violated the nine power pact and discriminated against United States citizens in China. Pittman contends that Japan has violated this treaty by such discriminations.

While Gillette said he was inclined to favor the Pittman resolution, he indicated his stand would be influenced greatly by what Secretary of State Hull has to say in reply to a request from the committee for his opinion. Some advice, probably written, is expected from the secretary this week.

Senator Borah (R-Idaho) raised the point in a meeting of the foreign relations committee Friday that restrictive action by the United States against exports to Japan might violate a treaty of amity and commerce.

Monopoly Committee Asks Congress To Overhaul U. S. Economic Machine

Washington, July 16. (AP)—The Monopoly Committee, making a preliminary report to congress, urged today that the anti-trust laws be revised as the first step toward restoration of a "prosperous economy."

Because its work is only about half completed, the committee said it could offer no comprehensive recommendations for overhauling the economic machine. It asked, however, that Congress act speedily on its preliminary proposals.

In a foreword, the committee told Congress that "the survival of the system of private property itself depends upon the stimulation of economic activity."

Thomas Asks Roosevelt To Curb McNutt's Political Activities

Socialist Leader Fears He Will Discredit Security Laws

New York, July 16. (AP)—Norman Thomas, the Socialist leader, made public today a copy of a letter to President Roosevelt which asserted that "the closest vigilance" would be necessary to prevent Paul McNutt, the new federal security administrator, from "discrediting by partisanship the whole machinery set up by the security legislation."

"Attention has already been publicly called to Mr. McNutt's great skill and ruthlessness in organizing public employees in the state of Indiana into a political machine," Thomas wrote. "His two per cent club is well known."

"What is not equally well known is the fact that from the state of Indiana I, and doubtless others, have heard many specific complaints that Mr. McNutt, as governor, used or permitted his political machine to use such pension legislation as Indiana then had entirely in the interest of himself and his political party. Is that now to be done on a grand scale in Washington?"

Thomas declared also that McNutt has used in Indiana a "doctrine of military law" which was "a far closer approach to Fascist contempt for individual rights than anything done by that other great Democratic politician, Frank Hague, the boss of Jersey City."

Demands End of Nazi Propaganda in N. S.

New York, July 16. (AP)—L. M. Birkhead, national director of the Friends of Democracy, Inc., today urged Secretary Hull to demand of the German ambassador an immediate cessation of alleged Nazi propaganda in the United States.

Citing numerous examples of what he described as "official Nazi propaganda" x x x sponsored by and emanating from official sources in the third Reich and currently disseminated in this country, Birkhead declared it was being shipped into the United States with "the obvious knowledge, complicity and cooperation of officials of Nazi Germany."

"This year the exhibits of Sudetenland, Prague, Bohemia, Moravia and Memel are here," he said. "We do not need to protect German culture in these lands. The Fuehrer has brought it home again with land and men."

No Mention of Politics

Although Hitler made no mention of politics, a political atmosphere pervaded the occasion with almost all high Nazi officials present except Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering who was on a yacht trip through German canals and streams.

The question of Danzig, which Hitler has promised to return to Germany, gathered momentum through the continued presence here of Danzig Nazi leader Albert Forster and the statement by a well-informed source that "the German Reich holds that the time has come to free German-Polish relations from this problem."

Rudolf Kirch, editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung and close to the foreign office, made that assertion in his newspaper, adding that "the less the English or others mix in the better."

Chamberlain under Fire for Refusal To Alter Cabinet

Many Leaders Want Him To Give Churchill Cabinet Post

London, July 16. (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain's refusal to reorganize his cabinet threatened today to result in a serious political controversy at a time when government quarters were anxious to meet international problems with a demonstration of national solidarity.

Seriousness of the situation was indicated by editorials or leading articles on the subject in nearly every London newspaper.

The Sunday Express displayed a front page banner line saying the campaign to put Winston Churchill in the cabinet was a "move to drive the premier out of office." It added a headline that "Mr. Chamberlain must either destroy his opponents or resign."

Churchill, conservative party member but often a sharply-spoken critic of the government, was first lord of the admiralty at the outbreak of the world war and subsequently held several other cabinet posts.

Chamberlain Criticized

Lord Astor's Sunday Observer, which usually supports the government, took Chamberlain to task for refusing to bring Churchill into the cabinet.

It described Churchill's exclusion as "repugnant to the average man's notions of national common sense and personal fair play."

"The present prime minister is the last man to accept a new colleague thrust on him as a censor and opponent," the Observer said, "on the other hand Mr. Chamberlain and his retinue cannot have it both ways either."

"They must admit that they need exceptional support from the opposition. Yet they refuse to lift a finger for that purpose."

The Sunday Times featured an article by Lord Elton on the editorial page entitled "keep an unbroken national front."

The article referred to Opposition Leader Clement R. Attlee, Sir Archibald Sinclair and David Lloyd George as "mischief makers" and said "recent propaganda against the prime minister has been both inopportune and unfair."

Elton Defends Premier

Lord Elton continued that Churchill undoubtedly would be brought into the cabinet in war time but that meanwhile the nation would be content to accept Chamberlain's judgment "if he holds that the time for it is not yet."

The tabloid Sunday Graphic also took this view, saying Chamberlain "does not set his face against change but refuses to be stampeded from outside."

The Sunday Dispatch carried an editorial page article entitled "what Winston Churchill will do if he gets back into the cabinet."

"The country as a whole is united in its resolve to retain Mr. Chamberlain and the national government," it said. A large section of opinion would like to see Mr. Churchill in that government, too. They see these two men as pillars of the state."

Japanese Again Warn the British

By GLADWIN HILL

New York, July 16. (AP)—Last week was a great one for fish stories—piscatorial and otherwise.

One angler reported catching a 20-inch alligator in a river in Indiana—a Luxora, Ark., man trained a minnow to eat out of his hand.

Some Des Moines, Ia., hunters reported seeing a rabbit kill a five-foot bull snake... and a Dunfield, N. J., farmer was reported to have equipped a mouse with a wooden leg made out of a golf tee...

Dizzy doings also were rampant in cupid's balliwick—

A Cincinnati girl asked to use the police lie detector to find out if she was really in love... an Omaha man hired an aviator to sky-write a love note seven miles wide... and two Mexican swains, aged 10 and 11, fought a pistol duel over the affections of a lady—aged 10...

A young Buffalo burglar advertised for honest work, blaming "too much competition." That may sound futile, but not when you consider that...

A Knoxville, Tenn., man advertised that he was "lazy, unreliable and irresponsible"—and immediately got four job offers... Here and there...

As the thermometer hit 93, a Manchester, Conn., man bought a sleigh... Prisoners in the Danville, Ky., workhouse were discovered to be getting liquor from outside—through straws...

A Pensacola, Fla., man who bought a grocery store three years ago was still looking for the former owner—to pay him for the store... When a Miami bank teller questioned a woman's husband was dead, she produced documents attesting that she had shot him... A Nashville man whose beard was cut off by vandals was granted damages of $100—$33.33 a foot... and a Newark, Del., man won a bee-catching contest when all the other contestants—got stung.

Japs Threaten To Attack Russia's Base in Siberia

Bombing of Furorujis May Bring Retaliatory Measures

Seven Wounded in Soviet Raid Far from Outer Mongolian Border

By RUSSEL BRINES

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 16. (AP)—A threat of a retaliatory Japanese air raid upon Soviet Russia's Siberian air base at Biagovschensk was made in diplomatic protests today following the bombing of Furorujis (Fularki) by Soviet fliers.

The Soviet raid came before dawn in the deepest thrust yet made into Manchoukuo territory in the border warfare that has been waged spasmodically since early in May. Seven persons were wounded and two buildings were destroyed.

400 Miles From Border

Furorujis is about 400 miles southwest of the important Manchoukuo center of Tsihsihar and on the main railway line between Harbin and Hailar. It is almost 400 miles east of the Outer Mongolian border where most of the fighting has taken place.

Aside from the fact the raid was the third within a week by Soviet planes on railroad centers deep in Manchoukuo territory, significance was seen in the threat of retaliation against Biagovschensk, Soviet base 500 miles northeast of the bombed town.

One of the strongest protests in the border warfare was made both at Ulan Bator (Urga), capital of Soviet-protected Outer Mongolia, and to the Soviet Consul at Harbin in Manchoukuo.

Threaten Retaliation

Domel, Japanese news agency, reported that in addition to the protest radioed to the Mongolian capital, Japanese authorities made representations to Soviet consular authorities at Harbin, threatening retaliatory action if "these unlawful activities continue."

The news agency said the Harbin consulate was told that the raid "differed radically from the border affair" and that responsibility for further developments "will rest with the Soviet Union."

Fritz Kuhn Held For Drunkenness

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Webster, Mass., July 16. (AP)—A man booked as Fritz Kuhn, who, Officer William Prout said, identified himself as the leader of the German-American band, was arrested today on what Prout said were charges of drunkenness and using profane language and was held for four hours before furnishing $54 bail.

Prout reported the address on which the man was a building in which New York police said the band office is located. Kuhn was docketed for arraignment tomorrow in Southbridge District Court.

Motorcycle Officer Henry Plasse, who arrested the man, said other members of his party named Kuhn as the band leader.

Plasse said the arrested Kuhn after an argument which ensued when he ordered substitution of a driver for the car in which Kuhn was riding. Plasse said the driver had been drinking and he had watched the actions of the party after they left a cafe.

House, Senate Leaders Drop Losing Fight

CLAIMS "HEAVEN"

John L. Lewis Threatens To Oppose Congressmen Who Voted for 130 Hours a Month Bill

By The Associated Press

Congressional advocates of restoring the prevailing wage WPA projects gave up hope yesterday.

Rep. Sabath (D-Ill.), who introduced an amendment to restore the old wage scale immediately after the current wave of strikes began, said he did not know whether he would press for action in view of the decision Saturday of a group of senators to drop their fight for amendment of the new relief act.

"I never try to do the impossible," Sabath told reporters.

The Senate group, headed by Senator Murray (R-Mont.), abandoned efforts to revise the law because of the WPA strikes which Murray said had proved "embarrassing."

The strikes have been in protest to the new provision which requires WPA workers to work a minimum of 130 hours a month to earn subsistence wages.

Threat From C. I. O.

From the Congress of Industrial Organizations, which has united with the American Federation of Labor in opposing the new wage regulation came a threat, meantime, of political retaliation against Congress members who approved the new provisions.

Speaking in Chicago, John L. Lewis, CIO president, said Congress had "cut the vitals out of the WPA program" and that the Democratic majority must share the responsibility with "the tory Republicans."

He added: "In the coming political campaigns, we shall want to know from any party or candidate who seeks labor support just what program they will advance to give people work."

In an interview earlier, Lewis said, however, that the CIO did not plan any demonstrations and that instances of participation by its members in the WPA strike were "marginal cases."

Claim Right to Strike

AFL building trades unions showed no signs of weakening on their stand that they had every right to strike.

James L. McDevill, president of the Philadelphia building trades council, declared Congress "refusal" to rescind the new wage regulations "constitutes a lockout" by the government.

He ordered the council's 3,000 members to remain away from work on 41 WPA projects today and warned that union rules require expulsion of any members who report to a "lockout" employer.

Three Thousand of Them Plan To Inspect New Mansion

New York, July 16. (AP)—A steamboat party of 3,000 disciples of Father Divine's Harlem cult may soon "call" on Newport's ultra-exclusive 400 to inspect the mansion donated to the little negro Messiah by Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman following a row with Newport city officials.

"Father is turning the idea over in his head," said John Lamb, the religious leader's white secretary.

"Naturally, everybody wants to see what the new Heaven looks like, and we'll probably make an excursion trip up the sound to see it—perhaps next week."

Lamb said Mrs. Kaufman had already turned over the property to the cult, with the papers held in escrow pending settlement of a title dispute raised by Countess Dorothy Filippini, widow of the late Richard Washburn Child, its former owner.

British Soldier Killed in China

Tientsin, China, July 16. (AP)—British military authorities reported today that J. W. Tomlinson, a private of the Durham Light Infantry, died yesterday from unexplained gunshot wounds received Friday.

Tomlinson, shot in the abdomen, was found Friday night by a French trooper about a mile from the Shanhaiwan barracks where a Durham infantry detachment is summering.

A Japanese-sponsored Chinese newspaper reported, meanwhile, that a Tientsin native "supreme anti-British committee" had ordered Chinese clerks, constables and police officers employed by the Japanese-blockaded British concession's municipal council to resign immediately.

Heretofore some Chinese employees in the British concession have received threatening letters, warning that members of their families would be tortured and that they would be killed for continuing to work there.

Hitler Praises German Culture In Munich Talk

Fuehrer Does Not Mention Politics in Opening Art Exhibition

Munich, Germany, July 16. (AP)—Adolf Hitler opened the German national art exhibition today with a 15-minute address notable in a world watching the tense Danzig situation because it contained no mention of the free city or any other political question.

The fuhrer was content to review German art briefly and to describe Nazi contributions to it, which he said show that "the national Socialist star of art is shining in the heavens."

His address and the opening of the exhibition were the high points of the third annual German art week.

The only political thing was in the introduction of Hitler by Nazi District Leader Adolf Wagner who said the art celebration "grows in the same measure and tempo with which the fuhrer augments the Reich."

Lord Astor's Sunday Observer, which usually supports the government, took Chamberlain to task for refusing to bring Churchill into the cabinet.

It described Churchill's exclusion as "repugnant to the average man's notions of national common sense and personal fair play."

"The present prime minister is the last man to accept a new colleague thrust on him as a censor and opponent," the Observer said, "on the other hand Mr. Chamberlain and his retinue cannot have it both ways either."

"They must admit that they need exceptional support from the opposition. Yet they refuse to lift a finger for that purpose."

The Sunday Times featured an article by Lord Elton on the editorial page entitled "keep an unbroken national front."

The article referred to Opposition Leader Clement R. Attlee, Sir Archibald Sinclair and David Lloyd George as "mischief makers" and said "recent propaganda against the prime minister has been both inopportune and unfair."

Elton Defends Premier
Lord Elton continued that Churchill undoubtedly would be brought into the cabinet in war time but that meanwhile the nation would be content to accept Chamberlain's judgment "if he holds that the time for it is not yet."

The tabloid Sunday Graphic also took this view, saying Chamberlain "does not set his face against change but refuses to be stampeded from outside."

The Sunday Dispatch carried an editorial page article entitled "what Winston Churchill will do if he gets back into the cabinet."

"The country as a whole is united in its resolve to retain Mr. Chamberlain and the national government," it said. A large section of opinion would like to see Mr. Churchill in that government, too. They see these two men as pillars of the state."

Japanese Again Warn the British

Shanghai, July 16. (AP)—A fresh warning to the British to alter their "pro-Chiang Kai-Shek policy" was issued in Tientsin today by Lieut. General Masaharu Honma, Japanese army commander in the North China port.

He declared the negotiations which opened yesterday in Tokyo between Japan and Great Britain would end in prompt rupture unless the British agreed to change their policy in China.

He predicted the formation of a new central government with jurisdiction over all important Chinese towns and ports and said: "Britain must abandon her hostile character if she wishes favorable treatment under such a new situation."

The Tokyo negotiations concern the dispute over Tientsin where the British and French concessions have been blocked by the Japanese since June 14.

Rear Admiral Arthur Murray visited the Japanese admiral at Tsingtao and received oral assurances the Japanese navy would do all possible to preserve order and prevent a repetition of Friday's bombing of the British consulate and attacks on British properties.

Japs Threaten To Attack Russia's Base in Siberia

Bombing of Fururujis May Bring Retaliatory Measures

Seven Wounded in Soviet Raid Far from Outer Mongolian Border

By RUSSEL BRINES
Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 16. (AP)—A threat of a retaliatory Japanese air raid upon Soviet Russia's Siberian air base at Blagoveshchensk was made in diplomatic protests today following the bombing of Fururujis (Fulark) by Soviet fliers.

The Soviet raid came before dawn in the deepest thrust yet made into Manchoukuo territory in the border warfare that has been waged spasmodically since early in May. Seven persons were wounded and two buildings were destroyed.

400 Miles From Border
Fururujis is about 400 miles southwest of the important Manchoukuo center of Tsitsihar and on the main railway line between Harbin and Hailar. It is almost 400 miles east of the Outer Mongolian border where most of the fighting has taken place.

Aside from the fact the raid was the third within a week by Soviet planes on railroad centers deep in Manchoukuo territory, significance was seen in the threat of retaliation against Blagoveshchensk, Soviet base 500 miles northeast of the bombed town.

One of the strongest protests in the border warfare was made both at Ulan Bator (Urga), capital of Soviet-protected Outer Mongolia, and to the Soviet Consul at Harbin in Manchoukuo.

Threaten Retaliation
Domestically, Japanese news agency reported that in addition to the protest radioed to the Mongolian capital, Japanese authorities made representations to Soviet consular authorities at Harbin, threatening retaliatory action if "these unlawful activities continue."

The news agency said the Harbin consulate was told that the raid "differed radically from the border affair" and that responsibility for further developments "will rest with the Soviet Union."

Fritz Kuhn Held For Drunkenness
Webster, Mass., July 16. (AP)—A man booked as Fritz Kuhn, who Officer William Prout said, identified himself as the leader of the German-American Bund, was arrested today on what Prout said were charges of drunkenness and using profane language and was held for four hours before furnishing $54 bail.

Prout reported the address on which the man was a building in which New York police said the bund office is located. Kuhn was docketed for arraignment tomorrow in Southbridge District Court.

Motorcycle Officer Henry Plasse, who arrested the man, named Kuhn as the bund leader.

Plasse said he arrested Kuhn after an argument which ensued when he ordered substitution of a driver for the car in which Kuhn was riding. Plasse said the driver had been drinking and he had watched the actions of the party after they left a cafe.

Rabbit Kills Five-Foot Bull Snake; Mouse Is Eupipped with Wooden Leg
By GLADWIN HILL
New York, July 16. (AP)—Last week was a great one for fish stories—piscatorial and otherwise.

One angler reported catching a 20-inch alligator in a river in Indiana—a Luxora, Ark., man trained a minnow to eat out of his hand.

Some Des Moines, Ia., hunters reported seeing a rabbit kill a five-foot bull snake . . . and a Dunfield, N. J., farmer was reported to have equipped a mouse with a wooden leg made out of a golf tee . . .

Dizzy doings also were rampant in cupid's balliwick—

CLAIMS "HEAVEN"

Countess Dorothy Child Filippini (above), fourth wife of the late author, Richard Washburn Child, claims equity in the Newport, R. I., mansion owned by Father Divine as a "Heaven" by Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman. She says she turned title over to Mrs. Kaufman on agreement the place was to be run as a hotel with both sharing in the profits.

Father Divine's Disciples Soon To See 'Heaven'

Three Thousand of Them Plan To Inspect New Mansion

New York, July 16. (AP)—A steamboat party of 3,000 disciples of Father Divine's Harlem cult may soon "call" on Newport's ultra-exclusive 400 to inspect the mansion donated to the little negro Messiah by Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman following a row with Newport city officials.

"Father is turning the idea over in his head," said John Lamb, the religious leader's white secretary.

"Naturally, everybody wants to see what the new Heaven looks like, and we'll probably make an excursion trip up the sound to see it—perhaps next week."

Lamb said Mrs. Kaufman had already turned over the property to the cult, with the papers held in escrow pending settlement of a title dispute raised by Countess Dorothy Filippini, widow of the late Richard Washburn Child, its former owner.

John L. Lewis Threatens To Oppose Congressmen Who Voted for 130 Hours a Month Bill

(By The Associated Press)
Congressional advocates of restoring the prevailing wage on WPA projects gave up hope yesterday.

Rep. Sabath (D-Ill.), who introduced an amendment to restore the old wage scale immediately after the current wave of strikes began, said he did not know whether he would press for action in view of the decision Saturday of a group of senators to drop their fight for amendment of the new relief act.

"I never try to do the impossible," Sabath told reporters.

The Senate group, headed by Senator Murray (R-Mont.), abandoned efforts to revise the law because of the WPA strikes which Murray said had proved "embarrassing."

The strikes have been in protest to the new provision which requires WPA workers to work a minimum of 130 hours a month to earn subsistence wages.

Threat From C. I. O.
From the Congress of Industrial Organizations, which has united with the American Federation of Labor in opposing the new wage regulation came a threat, meaning, of political retaliation against Congress members who approved the new provisions.

Speaking in Chicago, John L. Lewis, CIO president, said Congress had "cut the vitals out of the WPA program" and that the Democratic majority must share the responsibility with "the tory Republicans." He added:

"In the coming political campaigns, we shall want to know from any party or candidate who seeks labor support just what program they will advance to give people work."

Claim Right to Strike
AFL building trades unions showed no signs of weakening on their stand that they had every right to strike.

James L. McDevitt, president of the Philadelphia building trades council, declared Congress "refusal" to rescind the new wage regulations "constitutes a lockout" by the government.

He ordered the council's 3,000 members to remain away from work on 41 WPA projects today and warned that union rules require expulsion of any members who report to a "lockout" employer.

British Soldier Killed in China

Tientsin, China, July 16. (AP)—British military authorities reported today that J. W. Tomlinson, a private of the Durham Light Infantry, died yesterday from unexplained gunshot wounds received Friday.

Tomlinson, shot in the abdomen, was found Friday night by a French trooper about a mile from the Shanhaikwan barracks where a Durham Infantry detachment is summering.

A Japanese-sponsored Chinese newspaper reported, meanwhile, that a Tientsin native "supreme anti-British committee" had ordered Chinese clerks, constables and police officers employed by the Japanese-blockaded British concession's municipal council to resign immediately.

Heretofore some Chinese employees in the British concession have received threatening letters, warning that members of their families would be tortured and that they would be killed for continuing to work there.

Dizzy Dean Sent Home with Cut Arm

New York, July 16. (AP)—Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs sent Dizzy Dean back home tonight after the one-time ace pitcher showed up with a two-stitch wound in his left arm.

Hartnett said Dizzy called him to his hotel room before today's doubleheader in Brooklyn and showed him the cut arm. He said Dean told him the arm was hurt when he accidentally shoved it through a show-case.

New Dealers To Confer Today on Party's Program

Will Discuss Plans for Remainder of Session with Roosevelt

Washington, July 16 (AP)—Congress leaders will talk over with President Roosevelt tomorrow the legislative schedule for the remainder of the session and perhaps receive some advice on whether to press for enactment of the administration's $2,600,000,000 lending program regarded by many as the key to adjournment.

Considerable opposition to the lending program has developed and there are conflicting reports that it may be sidetracked for the session. Some administration supporters said most of the program could be carried out, in any event, without new legislation.

Neutrality "Dead Issue"

With most legislators agreed that neutrality is a dead issue at this session, only a final agreement on social security legislation and disposition of the lending program stands in the way of early adjournment.

The Senate banking committee is expected to report the lending legislation this week.

Chairman Wheeler (D-Mont.) of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee opposed a provision which would permit the RFC to purchase railway rolling stock and lease it to the carriers.

While the talk of shelving the program has been based on the idea that extensive debate on it might prolong the session, some members told the view that the desire on Capitol Hill for adjournment would make it easier to get the legislation through.

Republicans To Meet

House Minority Leader Martin (R-Mass.) was expected to call a meeting of the Republicans for either Tuesday or Wednesday to decide upon a course of action. Martin already has voiced his opposition to the legislation and expressed belief most of his colleagues were against it.

Meanwhile, a bloc of House Democrats seeking to revive the public works administration disclosed they might try to use the lending bill as a vehicle.

Representative Starnes (D-Ala.) author of a bill to recreate the PWA with a $450,000,000 appropriation, said if President Roosevelt failed to approve it he would offer it as an amendment to the lending bill.

Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) of the Senate Finance Committee said a joint Senate-House committee would meet tomorrow in an effort to iron out differences in the Social Security legislation, as approved by the two houses.

Increases Payments

The legislation generally increases old age insurance payments and freezes payroll taxes for such benefits at their present level for the next three years.

The Senate is scheduled to vote at 3 p. m. tomorrow on a bill to prohibit "black booking" and "blind selling" of motion pictures.

The House will consider this week the bill by Senator Hatch (D-NM) to restrict political activity by federal employees and a resolution by representative Smith (D-Va) for a congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board.

Kirchner said Danzig lies in a space whose destiny is not controlled by England, but by Germany and Russia. Germany, he declared, had "not only the right but the strength" to demand a solution today.

In his address Hitler told Germany's artists that in times of swift revolutionary developments those who form a political and worldly outlook of people "must attempt when necessary to influence artistic forces even at the risk of serious infringement of them in the sense of a common attitude toward the world."

"As the Reich has grown, so grows art," he said. "Architectural accomplishments are already powerful witnesses to the strength of the Reich in the cultural and political field."

The prospective loss of Gillette from their ranks came as a blow to opponents of the Pittman resolution, who had counted on presenting the same front against it that they offered to the administration's efforts to force revision of the neutrality law in this session.

In this connection, Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) said members of the isolationist bloc were holding themselves in readiness to oppose any administration move to bring up the neutrality question again.

Most legislators seemed to feel that neutrality was a dead issue at this session.

Like the snout of a giant fish, the submarine Squalus breaks with a mighty roar through the Atlantic's boiling waters off Portsmouth, N. H. A moment after this picture was taken, the steel tomb of 26 men slipped from its pontoons and once again returned to the darkness and mud of the ocean floor.

Four Groups of Scientists Find Way To Save Thousands of Lives

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York, July 16 (AP)—In one of the greatest scientific feats ever recorded, four groups of chemists, working independently, reported simultaneously today the synthesis of vitamin K, the new vitamin that stops internal bleeding.

This means thousands of lives will be saved annually, for the synthesis makes the vitamin, difficult to extract from natural substances, available in unlimited quantities.

Although Hemophilia, the "Royal Curse" type of bleeding, is not much affected by the vitamin, it stops bleeding in a large number of fatal diseases.

Artificial Vitamin Best

The vitamin previously was extracted from alfalfa. The chemists made it from coal tar. To the great surprise of the scientific world, the artificial vitamin has four times the potency of natural vitamin K.

The "tip" which set four of the groups on the trail of the synthesis is even more unusual than the unprecedented fact of four sets of workers all succeeding at the same time on a chemical job that usually takes years.

From the bodies of tuberculosis germs, at Yale University a few years ago was extracted a yellow, oily, previously unknown substance. It was named Phthiocol. Recently it was discovered that this oil contained something, a chemical made by the bacteria, which had vitamin K activity.

Knew Tuberculosis Formula

Chemists already know the formula of the tuberculosis oil. That made it comparatively simple to identify the portion of the oil containing the vitamin. After working out this fractional formula, they found an easy source of the vital material existed in a class of chemical compounds known as naphthoquinones. That is to say, chemists for years have had the essence of this vitamin in stock bottles standing on their shelves.

The simultaneous synthesis in four laboratories was announced in the journal of the American Chemical Society. The four were a group of seven chemists at Harvard University with three at Northwestern University, two from the Squibb Institute for Medical Research, New Brunswick, N. J., two at the University of California and five from the St. Louis University School of Medicine.

Vitamin K Not New

Vitamin K was discovered six years ago by Dr. H. Dam, a biological chemist working in Copenhagen, Denmark. Its life-saving values have come forward with a rush during the past two years.

The vitamin stops internal bleeding, helping the human body to produce prothrombin, the substance which clots blood. When the body lacks this essential, it is possible for internal hemorrhages to start with but slight apparent cause.

To such hemorrhages are attributed 25 per cent of all birth injuries of babies. The new vitamin can be given to babies by mouth and brings up their blood-clotting quickly to normal.

In addition to babies thousands of adults suffer from internal hemorrhages which have been found preventable in high degree by vitamin K. Frequently sufferers lack vitamin K, with the result that surgeons do not dare operate because of the high fatality of hemorrhage in such cases. By the new synthetic process, the Squibb laboratories already have made several pounds of vitamin K. One milligram a day is enough for an adult, so that these few pounds alone are sufficient for one dose apiece for hundreds of thousands.

American Dancer Sets Nazis down

Munich, July 16 (AP)—Pette Miriam Verne, smiling blue-eyed Pittsburgher whose dancing captivated Fuehrer Hitler, let the Nazis down tonight.

She failed to arrive here for a scheduled performance in "Merry Widow," Franc Lehár's light opera which is part of the German art week program.

Arrangements had been made for her to fly from Italy at Hitler's request. Theatre attendants said they had received no word from Miss Verne regarding her failure to appear. She had danced before Hitler several times.

Dickenson Glad He Told Nation about "Drinking Governors"

By G. MILTON KELLY

Charlotte, Mich., July 16 (AP)—Governor Luren D. Dickinson, in the role of Sunday school teacher, told his adult class today he hoped his stories of gay drinking parties at the recent national conference of Governors at Albany, N. Y., might result in a nation-wide reform movement.

The 80-year-old chief executive, who is retiring president of the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan, spoke in the little white frame Eaton Center Methodist church near here, addressing men and women, some of whom have been his Sunday school pupils for more than two decades.

"I made a strong statement that went across the continent," he declared. "It gives me the greatest satisfaction I have ever had in my life because I made a start. It is men and women in important positions who must make the start."

"I saw young girls drinking. Mothers set the example for their daughters, but they didn't tell their girls of their danger."

"We had one of the finest gatherings (at the governor's conference), but you can't gather in any such proportions but you have devils there. There was wholesale danger."

Women members of the class nodded in assent as the governor told them "years ago you never saw mothers sitting around banquets drinking. We'll never put the liquor traffic out of commission and get it away from our young people until the mothers set the example."

Kidnap Slayer of Billy Hamilton Is Hunted in Chicago

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—Search for Jack Russell, sought in the kidnap slaying of a University of Kansas graduate, turned to western suburbs today after a woman motorist reported to police she saw the escaped Oklahoma convict.

"I stopped for a traffic light in Oak Park," Mrs. Hattie Miller, 45, of Melrose Park, told authorities, "when a large, green colored car drove up alongside of me. When I returned home I saw his picture in the newspaper."

State and federal authorities are seeking Russell, 39, a former cowboy in the brutal slaying of Billy S. Hamilton 23, of Arkansas City, Kan., whose body was found in a ditch near Ringwood, Ill., Friday.

Russell also is wanted for the kidnaping of Bud Egholm, 23, of Oklahoma City, Okla., in Kenosha, Wis., Friday night and the kidnaping of R. E. Brown, of McAlester, Okla., shortly after the convict fled from a prison guard Tuesday.

he said, must be changed so that a patent is a "personal award to the inventor of use for a limited time" instead of a basis for monopolistic control or restraint of trade.

"It was while business had a free hand," the committee reported, "practically undisturbed by government intervention that the first crashing evidence of the failure of the economic machine appeared. The problem of agricultural surpluses, the problem of mineral surpluses, the railroad problem, the problem of surplus labor, and the appalling number of deficiency of food, shelter, and clothing for millions were all symptoms that developed long before government undertook to prevent the liquidation of business and to provide employment by made-work."

"Government acted. But the evidences of failure of the economic machine have not disappeared. People are still without jobs. Farmers are still without satisfactory markets. Industry is still without sufficient purchases. We are still enmeshed in an economy whose rate of growth is decreasing."

Fail To Identify Body of Man Found Floating in River

"Mr. Nobody" Will Be Buried in Nameless Grave

Walford, Md., July 16 (AP)—A nameless grave will receive the secret of "Mr. Nobody," the murdered man found floating in the Potomac river Thursday morning, Sheriff Robert V. Cooksey said today.

The Charles county sheriff said "identification" of the body by Mrs. James A. Leonard, of Vienna, Va., as her husband, who disappeared May 25, was disproved when Leonard was located in a Washington, D. C., hospital today.

Sheriff Cooksey said there was a remarkable resemblance between the 60-year-old Virginian and the man whose body was found in the river. All other efforts to identify the body have failed.

All Labels Removed

Fingerprints submitted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation did not tally with any on file there. All identifying labels were removed from the man's clothing.

Post-mortem examination showed the man was killed before his body was thrown in the river, Cooksey said. His skull was fractured by repeated heavy blows, and no water was found in his lungs.

"We have explored every possibility, and are up against a dead end," the sheriff said, "the body will be buried by the county tomorrow. We will reopen the case if any useful information comes to hand, but the man might as well have dropped from another planet for all we can learn of his identity."

Cooksey said the man's description does not tally with the description of any men missing in metropolitan centers on the middle Atlantic seaboard.

Watch Still Running

The murdered man was between 50 and 60 years old, well-dressed, and had a cheap watch and $2 in change in his pockets. The watch was still running when the body was found, indicating the corpse had not been in the river more than two hours prior to discovery, Cooksey said.

"We know he was murdered by blows on the head," Cooksey concluded. Until his identity is established, if ever, it is hopeless to continue the investigation."

of the 129,000 workers in the industry.

While they deliberated in a West Side hall, John L. Lewis, chief of the congress of industrial organizations, stated at a press conference that the "big four" constituted the "principal opposition at the moment but we are undertaking complete organization."

He explained the PWOC wanted national contracts with the packers similar to pacts other CIO units have in the steel and coal industries.

Lewis announced representatives of the steel workers organizing committee would confer here next week with Phillip Murray, one of his lieutenants, about the organization's future course in the "little steel" field.

James Weber Linn Dies in Chicago

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—James Weber Linn, author, newspaper columnist, English professor and Democratic member of the Illinois legislature, died today at his summer home in Lakeside, Mich., relatives reported here. He was 63 years old.

Linn, a nephew of the late Jane Addams, social service worker and founder of Hull house, had been on the faculty of the University of Chicago since he was 22 years old. He was elected to the state house of representatives last fall.

Linn was a newspaper columnist for 16 years on the old Chicago Herald, the Chicago Herald-Examiner, and the Chicago Daily Times. His literary work included novels, biographies and textbooks on English composition and literature.

Three Shootings Mark Week-End In Harlan Area

One Death Is Attributed to Labor Disorders

Harlan, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Death of the second miner wounded in a "pitched battle" between union mine pickets and national guardsmen, the beating and knifing of a non-union miner and three fatal shootings, one attributed to current labor disorders, marked the week-end in Harlan's strife-torn coal field.

(At Knoxville, Tenn., where peace negotiations between representatives of the United Mine Workers (CIO) and the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, were resumed yesterday, both sides declined comment after sessions today.)

Harlan, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Three fatal shootings, one attributed to current labor disorders, marked the week-end in this troop-guarded, strife-weary soft coal field.

While authorities held three men for questioning in the gun deaths, Harlan looked hopefully today toward a "neutral" Knoxville, Tenn., hotel room where "peace" conferences between operators and the CIO United Mine Workers Union were in progress.

Hearings are scheduled tomorrow for 246 men and women arrested after the skirmish last Wednesday between mine pickets and national guardsmen, in which two miners were fatally wounded and six others hurt. Among the group was George Tittler, Harlan U. M. W. district secretary-treasurer.

Wounded Miner Dies

Daniel Kye, 39, a miner, wounded in the battle, died at a hospital here today. Dock Caldwell was the other fatality. Captain John Hanbury of the Militia, shot at the same time, is showing steady improvement.

Willie Fee, 36, one of the men general Eliezer Carter, militia commander, said signed warrants charging "banding and confederating" against 233 persons, was held without charges in the fatal shooting of Bill Roberts, 35, idle union miner, last night at nearby Stanfill.

The general said "I wouldn't be surprised if the shooting was not connected with Fee's signing of the warrants."

Fee, employed at the mine of the Mahan-Ellison Coal Company at which last week's battle occurred, claimed self-defense. Roberts had worked for the company before the old union contract expired March 31.

Two verda miners were held in the deaths of Frank Bryant, 30, miner and Bradley Simpson, 25, truck driver, shot at Wallins Creek last night in what Carter described as "a drunken brawl" having "no connection" with the labor situation.

There were a number of "minor" disorders throughout the county yesterday, the general added. It was pay day for many miners.

Girls Clasp Hands Leap into Water in Attempt at Suicide

Baltimore, July 16 (AP)—With hands clasped, two young women jumped 60 feet into Baltimore harbor tonight during a heavy traffic flow across the Hanover street drawbridge.

Rescued in semi-conscious condition by the crew of a passing cabin cruiser, they were tentatively identified by police as Lucy Morrell, 22, and Charlotte Elliott, 24, who struck an abutment in her fall and was critically injured.

Benjamin Smith, owner of the cruiser, said he saw the two, perched on the bridge railing, throw hats and pocketbooks overboard before they jumped.

European Armament Boom Brings Many Orders to American Plants

France Orders Thousands of Tons of Copper from United States

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, July 17 (AP)—Europe's multi-billion dollar armament boom is echoing in the market place and the business news on this side of the Atlantic.

Copper producers have received from France what is described in mining circles as the biggest foreign order for the metal since the World war. French interests, market reports said last week, bought 50,000 tons of copper, about half to come from U. S. mines.

The Foreign Steel Scrap Cartel recently placed orders for 500,000 tons in this country. England, pushing its steel industry to capacity to meet big armament needs, was said to have displaced Japan as the chief consumer of metal from United States junk piles.

Tool makers and machine builders, who have shared with the aircraft industry in incoming foreign orders, were assured by "Business Week" more "big orders for machinery" were headed this way.

Stocks in Wall street moved higher last week in a moderate revival of trading after the extreme low small dealings of the previous week. Many outstanding shares approximated peak prices recorded in June, before the Danzig war scare. Bonds also advanced.

Leading industrial barometers, following the May and June upturn, held at levels representing full recovery of the early spring losses. The resumption of forward buying in copper, textiles and other markets, moreover, raised business hopes for more expansion in the remaining half of this year.

Terra Alta Stock Yards

Today's market showed a heavy run of fat and stocker cattle and a good supply of calves with a very light run on fat hogs.

Hogs, light weight 6.70 to 7.30, heavy weight 6.60.

Calves good to choice 9.00 to 10.40, medium 7.00 to 8.75, light weight and thin calves 5.00 to 6.80. Stocker calves 12.00 to 22.75 per head.

Cows, good 6.00 to 6.65, medium 5.00 to 5.75. Cutter and shelly cows 3.80 to 4.75. Milk cows common to good 35.00 to 66.00 per head.

Steers, good 7.75 to 8.35 common to medium 5.80 to 7.00, heifers good, 7.75, medium 6.85, common 5.80 to 6.25. Stocker steers and heifers 27.50 to 45.00 per head.

Bulls common to good 5.35 to 7.55, light stocker bulls 20.50 to 49.50 per head.

Lambs, common to medium 8.35 to 8.65, ewes common to medium 2.75 to 4.90 per head.

Horses, common to medium 25.50 to 99.00 per head.

Baltimore Man Drowns in River

Annapolis, Md., July 16 (AP)—Frank J. Darby, 35, of Baltimore, was drowned today while crabbing in the Severn river near the highway bridge.

Darby, one of a party spending the weekend here, was in a rowboat with Robert Jones, also of Baltimore. Darby was attempting to bring the anchor back in the boat when he lost his balance and toppled overboard.

The weight of the anchor pulled him under before he let go the rope, and he never rose to the surface. His body was recovered 30 minutes later. Attempts at artificial respiration failed.

Dr. M. M. Claffy, medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

Three Youngsters Dig Up $1,800 in Gold

Coldwater, Mich., July 16 (AP)—Three young brothers digging on their parents' farm four miles west of Bronson today unearthed a tile containing $1,880 in gold coins.

The coins were $5, $10 and $20 pieces dated from 1882 to 1902. The boys are Kenneth, 8; Robert, 6, and Hawley, 3, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belote. The family has lived on the farm only a year.

Belote took the money to the sheriff's office and deputies were trying to trace former occupants of the farm.

Raging Elephant Injures Keeper

Still trumpeting with rage, Rosie, of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus elephant herd, at Toronto, Ont., is urged away from injured keeper Ed Lewis (arrow) of Herkimer, N. Y. Rosie seized keeper Lewis in her trunk, whirled him into the air and dashed him to the ground, where another elephant trampled him. Lewis can be seen crawling to safety while other elephants are brought up to help quiet her.

19 Known Dead in Mine Tragedy, 9 Others Missing

Little Hope That Any Are Alive in Kentucky Disaster

Providence, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Water and "bad air" hampered fresh rescue squads 260 feet below ground today as they searched for explosion nine men still trapped in the Duvin soft coal mine. Nineteen have been found dead.

Ten miners, nearer the 185 foot shaft—only entrance to the deep pit—escaped. The blast occurred Friday night.

State Mine Inspector John Dunn said today there was "no possible chance" of the nine being alive now but D. J. Ruckman, Jr., assistant mine superintendent, refused to give up hope.

Daniel and Ruckman mapped the mine with members of the rescue squad which came up at 8 a. m., after hours seeking to reach the trapped group.

Rescue Work Hampered

The rescue men told of the "bad air" which hampered them and of the water, which was not deep but slowed up their work. After the conference, Ruckman said he believed the nine could remain alive until 10 o'clock (C.S.T.) tonight.

Ruckman said if the trapped men had "not been so level-headed" they would have gotten out safely a short time after the explosion.

The assistant superintendent explained that three young men near the entry, in which the nine were working at the time of the blast, got out quickly because they made a dash for safety near the shaft. If the nine had done the same thing, he said, they also would have made it safely.

Stick to Miners' Code

"But true to the code of the miners when there is trouble," Ruckman said, "they sealed it where they were." This is the reason he gave for refusing to give up hope.

Inspector Daniel said that even if the men had sealed in, and too thought they had, they still would not be able to withstand the conditions in the mine if there was even the slightest leak of gas through the sealed area.

The rescuers reported bodies of some of the 19 found in two entries near the explosion had been maimed. Daniel said no effort would be made to bring the bodies to the surface until the trapped men had been reached.

Maryland Veteran To Command Northland

Baltimore, July 16 (AP)—A Maryland veteran of battles with Arctic fleets will command the U.S.C. cutter Northland when the ship sails on the American government expedition to claim territory in Antarctica.

Lt. Commander William W. Kenner, until this week in charge of the cutter Calypso in Chesapeake bay, will leave Wednesday for Oakland, where the Northland is in drydock in preparation for the government-sponsored expedition, to be commanded by Rear Admiral Richard F. Byrd.

Kenner spent years in the Arctic serving as navigation officer aboard the Northland on her annual cruise "north of nowhere" to visit the Indian and Eskimo settlements from Nome to Point Barrow above the Arctic circle.

2,600 Jews at Sea And Unable to Land

Jerusalem, July 16 (AP)—The plight of 2,600 Jewish refugees on four Greek ships outside Palestine territorial waters has aroused sympathy of Palestine who are demanding that local authorities assist them to disembark despite the six-month immigration ban.

The captain of a ship carrying 600 refugees wireless French authorities for permission to pull up at a Lebanese port for food and water, saying he had attempted unsuccessfully to land his passengers at every port in the Mediterranean.

Chesapeake & Ohio Shops Hit Peak

Huntington, W. Va., July 15 (AP)—Recall last week of 100 men in the locomotive repair department of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway shops brought employment there to the highest peak in recent years, the Herald-Dispatch will say tomorrow.

The overall total of 1,600 compares with 900 on the rolls when the locomotive department suspended during the coal mining shut-down in April.

The shops are operating six days each week.

Hardly Right Place

Seattle, July 16—Bob Heaman, Broadway High School coach, who plays first base in the Northwest League, believes pitchers should curve only to fool batters. When Earl Johnson, Bremerton pitcher, threw to Heaman to catch a fly off first, he inadvertently tossed curve, which broke and caught Heaman on the thumb of his left hand.

New Dealers To Center Today on Party's Program

Will Discuss Plans for Remainder of Session with Roosevelt

Washington, July 16 (AP)—Congress leaders will talk over with President Roosevelt tomorrow the legislative schedule for the remainder of the session and perhaps receive some advice on whether to press for enactment of the administration's $2,600,000,000 lending program regarded by many as the key to adjournment.

Considerable opposition to the lending program has developed and there are conflicting reports that it may be sidetracked for the session. Some administration supporters said most of the program could be carried out, in any event, without new legislation.

Neutrality "Dead Issue"
With most legislators agreed that neutrality is a dead issue at this session, only a final agreement on social security legislation and disposition of the lending program stands in the way of early adjournment.

The Senate banking committee is expected to report the lending legislation this week.

Chairman Wheeler (D-Mont.) of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee opposed a provision which would permit the RFC to purchase railway rolling stock and lease it to the carriers.

While the talk of shelving the program has been based on the idea that extensive debate on it might prolong the session, some members hold the view that the desire on Capitol Hill for adjournment would make it easier to get the legislation through.

Republicans To Meet

House Minority Leader Martin (R-Mass.) was expected to call a meeting of the Republicans for either Tuesday or Wednesday to decide upon a course of action. Martin already has voiced his opposition to the legislation and expressed belief most of his colleagues were against it.

Meanwhile, a bloc of House Democrats seeking to revive the public works administration disclosed they might try to use the lending bill as a vehicle.

Representative Starnes (D-Ala.) author of a bill to recreate the FWA with a $350,000,000 appropriation, said if President Roosevelt failed to approve it he would offer it as an amendment to the lending bill.

Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) of the Senate Finance Committee said a joint Senate-House committee would meet tomorrow in an effort to iron out differences in the Social Security legislation, as approved by the two houses.

Increases Payments

The legislation generally increases old age insurance payments and freezes payroll taxes for such benefits at their present level for the next three years.

The Senate is scheduled to vote at 3 p. m. tomorrow on a bill to prohibit "block booking" and "blind selling" of motion pictures.

The House will consider this week the bill by Senator Hatch (D-NM.) to restrict political activity by federal employees and a resolution by representative Smith (D-Va.) for a congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board.

come to an understanding with Germany and through a policy of loyal cooperation with the Reich secure a guarantee for your independence and welfare which we English in the long run, even if we wanted to, could not provide."

Kirchner said Danzig lies in a space whose destiny is not controlled by England, but by Germany and Russia. Germany, he declared, had "not only the right but the strength" to demand a solution today.

In his address Hitler told Germany's artists that in times of swift revolutionary developments those who form a political and worldly outlook of people "must attempt when necessary to influence artistic forces even at the risk of serious infringement of them in the sense of a common attitude toward the world."

commerce signed by Japan and the United States in 1911. Both countries agreed to place no restrictions on their commercial relations that were not placed uniformly on other nations.

The prospective loss of Gillette from their ranks came as a blow to opponents of the Pittman resolution, who had counted on presenting the same front against it that they offered to the administration's efforts to force revision of the neutrality law in this session.

In this connection, Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) said members of the isolationist bloc were holding themselves in readiness to oppose any administration move to bring up the neutrality question again.

Most legislators seemed to feel that neutrality was a dead issue at this session.

The Squalus Is Raised -- but Sinks again

Four Groups of Scientists Find Way To Save Thousands of Lives

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York, July 16 (AP)—In one of the greatest scientific feats ever recorded, four groups of chemists, working independently, reported simultaneously today the synthesis of vitamin K, the new vitamin that stops internal bleeding.

This means thousands of lives will be saved annually, for the synthesis makes the vitamin, difficult to extract from natural substances, available in unlimited quantities.

Although Hemophilia, the "Royal Curse" type of bleeding, is not much affected by the vitamin, it stops bleeding in a large number of less spectacular but more frequently fatal diseases.

Artificial Vitamin Best

The vitamin previously was extracted from alfalfa. The chemists made it from coal tar. To the great surprise of the scientific world, the artificial vitamin has four times the potency of natural vitamin K.

The "tip" which set four of the groups on the trail of the synthesis is even more unusual than the unprecedented fact of four sets of workers all succeeding at the same time on a chemical job that usually takes years.

From the bodies of tuberculosis germs, at Yale University a few years ago was extracted a yellow, oily, previously unknown substance. It was named Phthiocol. Recently it was discovered that this oil contained something, a chemical made by the bacteria, which had vitamin K activity.

Knew Tuberculosis Formula
Chemists already know the formula of the tuberculosis oil. That made it comparatively simple to identify the portion of the oil containing the vitamin. After working out this fractional formula, they found an easy source of the vital material existed in a class of chemical compounds known as naphthoquinones. That is to say, chemists for years have had the essence of this vitamin in stock bottles standing on their shelves.

The simultaneous synthesis in four laboratories was announced in the journal of the American Chemical Society. The four were a group of seven chemists at Harvard University with three at Northwestern University, two from the Squibb Institute for Medical Research, New Brunswick, N. J., two at the University of California and five from the St. Louis University School of Medicine.

Vitamin K Not New
Vitamin K was discovered six years ago by Dr. H. Dam, a biological chemist working in Copenhagen, Denmark. Its life-saving values have come forward with a rush during the past two years.

The vitamin stops internal bleeding, helping the human body to produce prothrombin, the substance which clots blood. When the body lacks this essential, it is possible for internal hemorrhages to start with but slight apparent cause.

To such hemorrhages are attributed 25 per cent of all birth injuries of babies. The new vitamin can be given to babies by mouth and brings up their blood-clotting quickly to normal.

In addition to babies thousands of adults suffer from internal hemorrhages which have been found preventable in high degree by vitamin K. Frequently sufferers lack vitamin K, with the result that surgeons do not dare operate because of the high fatality of hemorrhage in such cases. By the new synthetic process, the Squibb laboratories already have made several pounds of vitamin K. One milligram a day is enough for an adult, so that these few pounds alone are sufficient for one dose apiece for hundreds of thousands.

American Dancer Sets Nazis down

Munich, July 16 (AP)—Petite Miriam Verne, smiling blue-eyed Pittsburgher whose dancing captivated Fuehrer Hitler, let the Nazis down tonight.

She failed to arrive here for a scheduled performance in "Merry Widow," Franz Lehár's light opera, which is part of the German art week program.

Arrangements had been made for her to fly from Italy at Hitler's request. Theatre attendants said they had received no word from Miss Verne regarding her failure to appear. She had danced before Hitler several times.

Dickenson Glad He Told Nation about "Drinking Governors"

By G. MILTON KELLY

Charlotte, Mich., July 16 (AP)—Governor Luren D. Dickinson, in the role of Sunday school teacher, told his adult class today he hoped his stories of gay drinking parties at the recent national conference of Governors at Albany, N. Y., might result in a nation-wide reform movement.

The 80-year-old chief executive who is retiring president of the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan, spoke in the little white frame, Epoke Center Methodist church near here, addressing men and women, some of whom have been his Sunday school pupils for more than two decades.

"I made a strong statement that went across the continent," he declared. "It gives me the greatest satisfaction I have ever had in my life because I made a start. It is men and women in important positions who must make the start."

"I saw young girls drinking. Mothers set the example for their daughters, but they didn't tell their girls of their danger."

"We had one of the finest gatherings (at the governor's conference), but you can't gather in any such proportions but you have devils there. There was wholesale danger."

Women members of the class nodded in assent as the governor told them "years ago you never saw mothers sitting around banquets drinking. We'll never put the liquor traffic out of commission and get it away from our young people until the mothers set the example."

Kidnap Slayer of Billy Hamilton Is Hunted in Chicago

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—Search for Jack Russell, sought in the kidnap slaying of a University of Kansas graduate, turned to western suburbs today after a woman motorist reported to police she saw the escaped Oklahoma convict.

"I stopped for a traffic light in Oak Park," Mrs. Hattie Miller, 45, of Melrose Park, told authorities, "when a large, green colored car drove up alongside of me. When I returned home I saw his picture in the newspaper."

State and federal authorities are seeking Russell, 39, a former cowboy in the brutal slaying of Billy S. Hamilton 23, of Arkansas City, Kan., whose body was found in a ditch near Ringwood, Ill., Friday.

Russell also is wanted for the kidnaping of Bud Ekhom, 23, of Oklahoma City, Okla., in Kenosha, Wis., Friday night and the kidnaping of R. E. Brown, of McAlester, Okla., shortly after the convict fled from a prison guard Tuesday.

Three Shootings Mark Week-End In Harlan Area

One Death Is Attributed to Labor Disorders

Harlan, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Death of the second miner wounded in a "pitched battle" between union mine pickets and national guardsmen, the beating and knifing of a non-union miner and three fatal shootings, one attributed to current labor disorders, marked the week-end in Harlan's strife-torn coal field.

(At Knoxville, Tenn., where peace negotiations between representatives of the United Mine Workers (CIO) and the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, were resumed yesterday, both sides declined comment after sessions today.)

Harlan, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Three fatal shootings, one attributed to current labor disorders, marked the week-end in this troop-guarded, strife-weary soft coal field.

While authorities held three men for questioning in the gun deaths, Harlan looked hopefully today toward a "neutral" Knoxville, Tenn., hotel room where "peace" conferences between operators and the CIO United Mine Workers Union were in progress.

Hearings are scheduled tomorrow for 246 men and women arrested after the skirmish last Wednesday between mine pickets and national guardsmen, in which two miners were fatally wounded and six others hurt. Among the group was George Titler, Harlan U. M. W. district secretary-treasurer.

Wounded Miner Dies
Daniel Noel, 39, a miner, wounded in the battle, died at a hospital here today. Dock Caldwell was the other fatality. Captain John Hambery of the Militia, shot at the same time, is showing steady improvement.

Willie Fee, 36, one of the men general Elmore Carter, militia commander, said signed warrants charging "banding and confederating" against 233 persons, was held without charges in the fatal shooting of Bill Roberts, 35, idle union miner, last night at nearby Stanfill.

The general said "I wouldn't be surprised if the shooting was not connected with Fee's signing of the warrants."

Fee, employed at the mine of the Mahan-Ellison Coal Company at which last week's battle occurred, claimed self-defense. Roberts had worked for the company before the old union contract expired March 31.

Two verda miners were held in the deaths of Frank Bryant, 30, miner and Bradley Simpson, 30, truck driver, shot at Wallins Creek last night in what Carter described as "a drunken brawl" having "no connection" with the labor situation.

There were a number of "minor" disorders throughout the county yesterday, the general added. It was pay day for many miners.

Girls Clasp Hands Leap into Water in Attempt at Suicide

Baltimore, July 16 (AP)—With hands clasped, two young women jumped 60 feet into Baltimore harbor tonight during a heavy traffic flow across the Hanover street drawbridge.

Rescued in semi-conscious condition by the crew of a passing cabin cruiser, they were tentatively identified by police as Lucy Morrell, 22, and Charlotte Elliott, 24, who struck an abutment in her fall and was critically injured.

Benjamin Smith, owner of the cruiser, said he saw the two, perched on the bridge railing, throw hats and pocketbooks overboard before they jumped.

Three Youngsters Dig Up $1,800 in Gold

Coldwater, Mich., July 16 (AP)—Three young brothers digging on their parents' farm four miles west of Bronson today unearthed a pile containing $1,800 in gold coins.

The coins were $5, $10 and $20 pieces dated from 1882 to 1902. The boys are Kenneth, 8; Robert, 6, and Hawley, 3, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belote. The family has lived on the farm only a year.

Belote told the money to the sheriff's office and deputies were trying to trace former occupants of the farm.

By FREDERICK GARDNER
New York, July 17 (AP)—Europe's multi-billion dollar armament boom is echoing in the market place and the business news on this side of the Atlantic.

Copper producers have received from France what is described in mining circles as the biggest foreign order for the metal since the World War. French interests, market reports said last week, bought 50,000 tons of copper, about half to come from U. S. mines.

The Foreign Steel Scrap Cartel recently placed orders for 500,000 tons in this country. England, pushing its steel industry to capacity to meet big armament needs, was said to have displaced Japan as the chief consumer of metal from United States junk piles.

Tool makers and machine builders, who have shared with the aircraft industry in incoming foreign orders, were assured by "Business Week" more "big orders for machinery" were headed this way.

Stocks in Wall Street moved higher last week in a moderate revival of trading after the extremely small dealings of the previous week. Many outstanding shares approximated peak prices recorded in June, before the Danzig war scare. Bonds also advanced.

Leading industrial barometers, following the May and June upturn, held at levels representing full recovery of the early spring losses. The resumption of forward buying in copper, textiles and other markets, moreover, raised business hopes for more expansion in the remaining half of this year.

Baltimore Man Drowns in River

Annapolis, Md., July 16 (AP)—Frank J. Darby, 35, of Baltimore, was drowned today while crabbing in the Severn river near the highway bridge.

Darby, one of a party spending the weekend here, was in a rowboat with Robert Jones, also of Baltimore. Darby was attempting to bring the anchor back in the boat when he lost his balance and toppled overboard.

The weight of the anchor pulled him under before he let go the rope, and he never rose to the surface. His body was recovered 30 minutes later. Attempts at artificial respiration failed.

Dr. M. M. Claffy, medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

Little Hope That Any Are Alive in Kentucky Disaster

Providence, Ky., July 16 (AP)—Water and "bad air" hampered fresh rescue squads 260 feet below ground as they drove ahead toward nine men still trapped in explosion in the Duvin soft mine. Nineteen have been dead.

Ten miners, nearer the blast, escaped—only entrance to the deep shaft—escaped. The blast occurred Friday night.

State Mine Inspector John Dwyer said today there was "no possible chance" of the nine being alive, but D. J. Ruckman, Jr., assistant mine superintendent, refused to give up hope.

Daniel and Ruckman mapped the mine with members of the rescue squad which came up at 8 a. m., after hours seeking to reach the trapped group.

Rescue Work Hampered
The rescue men told of the "bad air" which hampered them and the water, which was not deep, slowed up their work. At the conference, Ruckman said, he believed the nine could remain alive, despite the condition of the mine, until 10 o'clock (C.S.T.) tonight.

Ruckman said if the trapped men had "not been so level-headed they would have gotten out safely a short time after the explosion."

The assistant superintendent explained that three young men near the entry, in which the nine were working at the time of the blast, got out quickly because they made a dash for safety near the shaft. If the nine had done the same thing, he said, they also would have made it safely.

Stick to Miners' Code
"But true to the code of the miners when there is trouble," Ruckman said, "they sealed where they were." This is the reason he gave for refusing to give up hope.

Inspector Daniel said that even if the men had sealed in, and he thought they had, they still would not be able to withstand the conditions in the mine if there were even the slightest leak of air through the sealed area.

The rescuers reported bodies of some of the 19 found in two entries near the explosion had been maimed. Daniel said no effort would be made to bring the bodies to the surface until the trapped men had been reached.

Maryland Veteran To Command Northland

Baltimore, July 16 (AP)—A Maryland veteran of battles with Arctic ice floes will command the U.S.C.G. cutter Northland when the ship sails on the American government expedition to claim territory in Antarctica.

Lt. Commander William W. Kenner, until this week in charge of the cutter Calypso in Chesapeake Bay, will leave Wednesday for Oakland, where the Northland is in drydock in preparation for the government-sponsored expedition, to be commanded by Rear Admiral Richard P. Byrd.

Kenner spent years in the Arctic serving as navigation officer aboard the Northland on her annual cruise "north of nowhere" to visit the Indian and Eskimo settlements from Nome to Point Barrow about the Arctic circle.

2,600 Jews at Sea And Unable to Land

Jerusalem, July 16 (AP)—The plight of 2,600 Jewish refugees on foot griet ships outside Palestine territorial waters has aroused inhabitants of Palestine who are demanding that local authorities assist them to disembark despite the six-month immigration ban.

The captain of a ship carrying 600 refugees wireless French authorities for permission to put in at a Lebanese port for food and water, saying he had attempted unsuccessfully to land his passengers at every port in the Mediterranean.

America's Going West

Yellowstone National Park, Wyo. (AP)—The U.S.A. seems headed for a new "See America" travel record. Registrations at Yellowstone, considered a barometer for western travel, are greater this year than ever. June registrations were 3.8 per cent greater than those in June, 1938, and 21 per cent over those of June, 1937.

More Tribute—Fewer Jobs

FROM THE BEGINNING of the first Roosevelt administration, the hero worshipping attitude of the New York Post has been "the king can do no wrong."

This editorial fawning reached its high when the Senate voted, before the New Deal trade with the silverites, to end Treasury purchases of silver.

"We have been supporting the entire Mexican mining industry," the Post wailed, "by buying 5,000,000 ounces a month of Mexican silver, a by-product. The mining industry, in turn, has been paying half the costs of Mexican government in taxes. We have just kicked out this prop."

Right. Americans have been burdened with taxes to pay half the cost of the Mexican government, which, in turn, meant fewer jobs in the United States. Yet the Post deplores the ending of such a situation.

But the Post doesn't stop there. It proceeds to rebuke those Americans who resented Mexico's expropriation of American-owned oil fields. "We allowed ourselves the luxury of indignation," chides the internationally-minded Post. Then it goes on to commend the president's proposal to lend $500,000,000 to Latin American nations and asks Americans to give serious thought to this question: "Could a loan to Mexico be used to provide some payment to American owners of the oil fields?"

All of this sounds very strange from an American newspaper. Yet it is exactly the logical conclusion to which New Deal folly has led us.

It means simply this: crushing taxation that makes fewer jobs at home to pay a bounty to make more jobs abroad. And that bounty to be paid to a nation which has seized American property without compensation! But we shouldn't be indignant about that. We shouldn't slap Mexico on the wrist. Instead, we should pay her more tribute so that she may be able to pay for at least some of our property which she has stolen!

We wonder what our 11,000,000 unemployed think about this substitution of the New Deal creed for the American creed.

Bees and Autos

"HE DIED OF injuries suffered when his auto crashed into a tree while he was trying to brush a bee from the car."

This, from the news columns, tells a story of what, with more or less tragedy, often happens this season of the year when bees are honey gathering.

It is well to remember these few rules if a bee, or any allied stinging insect, enters your car as you are driving:

First, the sting of a bee is not fatal. It doesn't hurt much more than a bite from a mosquito, though the subsequent pain and swelling are somewhat greater. Prompt application of ammonia, bicarbonate or baking soda or even wet mud—anything that is a strong alkali—will, to a great degree, counteract the effect of the acid injected by the bee's sting.

Second, don't get panicky. The bee in your car is just as frightened as you are and more anxious to get out than you are to oust it. The bee buzzes frantically on the windshield. Swatting at it with your hand or handkerchief only frightens it the more. Then in its darting about it may strike your face and sting.

This needless fear of a simple sting or the swatting which diverts your attention from managing the car may cause a fatal crash.

Third, if a bee gets in your car, steer over to the side of the road. Open both doors. The cross draft of air will carry the bee out or its own natural instinct to seek freedom will cause it to fly out. If you feel afraid, after you have opened the doors, get out yourself. The bee will probably fly out before you.

Then you may continue your journey in safety.

Matter of Habit, Probably

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, which is painstakingly efficient in the gathering of taxes if anything, has accused several New York night clubs of dodging income and other taxes, and has returned indictments against nine men and four corporations on charges ranging from failure to file returns to embezzlement.

The charges culminated six months of investigation during which the brow of many a boniface along the historic White Way of Gotham was furrowed with uneasiness as hawk-eyed federal agents dropped in repeatedly and unexpectedly, not to drink and be merry, but to scrutinize ledgers.

New York night clubs are so practiced in the art of gypping, that it would be no wonder to learn that they have been gypping the government.

As to Early Adjournment

CONGRESS can adjourn within about ten days if President Roosevelt does not insist on carrying the Senate fight over the Neutrality bill to a conclusion and on getting legislation authorizing all the various subdivisions of his new $3,880,000,000 spend-lead program.

A battle to the end on neutrality, it is evident, would last for months. Forty senators, it has been disclosed—perhaps a Senate majority if a showdown vote comes—are opposed to giving the president more power than he now possesses over traffic in munitions and implements of war, the use of which power might draw in the United States if war breaks out in Europe.

The stand of these senators reflects a growing public opinion in favor of a strictly American foreign policy. That would be a policy which, as far as possible, keeps the American government out of the game of international politics being played in Europe.

The breakdown of the spend-lead scheme into its parts has produced a crop of controversies. The workability of the plan is in question, together with the dubiousness of selling rafts of securities in the public markets which would be poorly supported by values but which, on account of the government's guarantee, might be salable. The new spending device seems necessarily another time-consuming subject, if a full legislative validation is sought.

The arguments for postponement until the 1940 session are good. The Neutrality bill would retain its present status, passed by the House and in the Senate Foreign Relations committee. While presidential politics will be hotter in 1940, the boiling point has already been reached. Congress now quitting, its wrangles would be out of the situation and business would have the months until next year to look around and find out where it stands.

Loser—Heads or Tails

THE PRESIDENT of a large corporation, in a recent report to stockholders on the company's heavy tax burden, said:

"It seems that we are running our business for the benefit of the government instead of for the benefit of our stockholders."

That was not over-statement. Treasury department figures show that over the twenty-one year span from 1916 to 1936 inclusive, tax payments have increased more than threefold.

Under the New Deal they have come to exceed actually the total of net income from all corporate activity available for stockholders.

In 1926, the tax gatherer took forty-six cents for each dollar of net income available for stockholders. In 1936, the latest year for which the Treasury statistics are available, he took $1.11 for each dollar of net income.

The figures are impressive as showing how New Deal policies have dried up the sources of recovery and killed incentive to invest or spend.

Why under the New Deal should "risk capital" come from hiding? If the risk fails, the investor loses. If it succeeds, the government wins.

Industrial Relations

"UNLESS government and the rank and file of labor unite on some intelligent program," writes a correspondent, "and unless that program is independent of politics and based on economic security for the employer as well as for the employee, the door will always be open to the chiseling type of labor leader."

There is a great deal of sound wisdom in this observation. The present disintegrated state of organized labor, with too many "big shots" engaged in all kinds of maneuvering for positions of advantage is conducive to racketeering and exploitation in their most aggravated forms.

Only by means of a disinterested governmental approach and an equally disinterested attitude on the part of outstanding labor leaders can there be attained the degree of stability requisite to secure and mutually beneficial industrial relations.

Britain and France think their giant joint display of air strength may bring the Fuehrer to his senses. It is in line with this new shock treatment for the mental case.

No one seems to know for sure what is going on in fantastic Louisiana. A theory is that the Mardi Gras is still running, as a form of government.

All the Baltic powder magazine needs now is a spark—something like a picture postcard from Danzig to Friend Adolf, saying "Wish you were here."

You can tell an amateur philanthropist. He is astonished when those he has benefited knock him.

That Guest Towel

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I've been watching one for six months and it's as immaculate as when it first came from the wash and the ironing board.

Perhaps it isn't same Guest Towel, or perhaps the Lady of the House takes it down occasionally and sends it to the laundry and puts it back again. But that doesn't alter the situation. The point I'm making is that that uncouth brute ever comes into that bathroom, runs the water over his hands, scrubs them vigorously, reaches for that prim little towel—and uses it.

And yet it isn't a formidable-looking object at all. It isn't a bit fancy. Even though it is so obviously what it is supposed to be—a Guest Towel.

But there's something about the thing that makes cowards of people. After all, it IS a Guest Towel. And Guest Towels, although I admit I have never used one, don't look absorbent. They have a starched and stiff look that is subtly repellent. When a friend is in my home and wants to wash his hands, I go to the linen closet and pick up a little rough family hand-towel and say, "Here!" And he uses that thankfully. And when I'm in his house he does the same for me.

He knows better than to pull down the Guest Towel for me—he wife wouldn't mind, I suppose—but he doesn't do it, that's all. And neither do I. We know our stuff.

But some day I intend to break all precedents. I'll be in one of those spotless, don't-touch-a-thing households tyrannized over by one of those Perfect Housewives. . . . And I'll go into her bathroom and wash my hands—and I won't wash them too clean, either—and with a grim look I'll reach out for one of those pretty tricks with embroidery in high relief or whatever you call it—and I'LL USE IT! And I'll rumple it and I'll throw it in the dirty linen receptacle. . . . AND THE HEAVENS WILL FALL IN ON ME!

The windows will rattle. . . . and the cute little pink statue down on the parlor table will lift its eyes in astonishment. . . . and the sky will darken and thunder will roar from peak to peak and back again. . . . and all the terrified guests that ever looked furtively around a bathroom and then used their handkerchiefs will raise great shouts of triumph. . . . And I'll be sitting in the middle of all that wreckage I've made—with the most self-satisfied expression any of you ever saw on a man. . . . Just see if I don't!

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Up and down Broadway, or, as Mr. Winchell calls it, the Main Stem, there is gleeful chuckling and chortling among the hoofers and spooferers of the vaudeville tribe—they whose living was whisked away from them by new and competing entertainment trends. They think they see the handwriting on the wall for their public enemy No. 1—the moving pictures. It is as clear to them as was that projected light spot on the wall in Belshazzar's palace.

Edwin C. Hill

Television is going to put the movies right in the ash can—so say the show folk of the old Orpheum days. I find every bar and street corner up and down Broadway buzzing with that kind of talk. They firmly believe the movies are as dead as the Pat and Mike joke.

Better still, from their point of view, vaudeville suits television to a goat's heel. Some of the old-timers already are hooked up for workouts through the continuing experimental stages, and the profession is lit up with a new hope.

Television is going to put the movies right in the ash can—so say the show folk of the old Orpheum days. I find every bar and street corner up and down Broadway buzzing with that kind of talk. They firmly believe the movies are as dead as the Pat and Mike joke.

Has Definite Limit

To date, the televisers are having trouble in catching a played out spectacle, such as baseball game or a great public ceremonial. As the television camera is today there is a definite limit to the spread of landscape, depth and swiftly changing focus which can be managed with it. The best results are obtained with fairly close-in shots, with the goings on safely in range, and under control, subject to repeated rehearsals if necessary—in short, studio work, and so far some form of vaudeville seems to come nearer to anything else in meeting these specifications.

The television people are convinced that they will have to offer something more exciting than a speaker or a singer. They are combining every field for possibilities and that is bringing out of the old midtown actors' boarding houses forgotten men and women who used to get top-billing in electric lights, fifteen or twenty years ago.

"Listen, Sam, that dude policeman act of mine had 'em rolling in the aisles. Oily Morosco comes around back and he says, 'Mel,' he says, 'I want a big piece of you. I've got a spot for you in the biggest show anybody ever pulled around here and it means a stack of dough so big you couldn't run and jump over it. Oily would have done it, too—but you know—he got all jammed up and then came those movies. But let me at this television—I'm set to see this Gilbert Seldes next week and if I don't sell him an act—"

Blame Pictures

I was surprised to discover how almost unflinchingly the vaudevillians blame the moving pictures for their troubles. This hostility is more marked among the old trouper, who used to get their living from the road, rather than among the younger and less travelled entertainers. Their story is that it was the picture show monopoly of theatres in inland cities and towns, rather than better entertainment which put the short-turn specialties out of business. They are happily on fire with the idea that their old enemy is done for.

I have an idea that the movies are a pretty lively corpse and that television hasn't yet put on its seven-league boots. Technicians tell me that there are tremendous problems still to be solved, and that the radio and movie magnates have no call to be losing any sleep. There is also to be noted the fact that the two latter are no longer gimcrack affair, and will not easily be dislodged from their hard-won place as purveyors of both information and entertainment, even by such a dazzling miracle as television.

England Makes Strides

Again, England, particularly, is making rapid progress in stepping up television for picture screen projection and it isn't impossible that the show folk will find television helping rather than hurting the picture houses. We don't want to be a kill-joy. I think most of us would welcome the oldtimers back with a whoop—witness the big hand Joe Jackson gets with that venerable trick bicycle—but it looks as if they might be waiting in the wings for quite a spell, if they're banking on television. Tax Gatherer Versus Owner

From Railway Age

One of the principal reasons why the railway situation does not improve is that taxes are taking a steadily increasing portion of the earnings left after paying operating expenses.

The following figures are for the first five months of the years mentioned:

In the five years 1925-1929, inclusive, the amount of earnings available, after operating expenses for division between the railway companies and tax collectors was 2,710 million dollars. Of this amount the companies kept 1,953 million dollars or seventy-two per cent, and the tax collectors took 756 million dollars, or twenty-eight per cent.

In the five years ending with 1934 the amount left for division was much smaller—only 1,497 million dollars. Of this the railway companies were allowed to keep 875 millions, or fifty-eight per cent, and the tax collectors took 622 million, or forty-two per cent.

In the five years, 1935-1939, inclusive, the total divisible declined further, to 1,415 million dollars. Of this the railway companies kept less than 761 million dollars, or fifty-four per cent, and the tax collectors took over 654 million dollars, or forty-six per cent.

The five years, 1930-1934 included 1932 and 1933, usually considered the worst of the depression, while the five years, 1935-1939 included 1936 and 1937, both considered years of "recovery." But it will be noted that the last five years the railway companies, after paying their operating expenses, kept 114 million dollars less while the tax collectors took thirty-two million dollars more.

In the first five months of 1932 and 1933 combined, the tax collectors took 54.6 per cent of the earnings over operating expenses but the "recession" years have been relatively still worse for the companies and better for the tax collectors.

In the first five months of 1938 and 1939 combined the railway companies got twenty million dollars less than in 1932 and 1933 combined—when the New Dealers claim the nation was about at its last gasp—while the tax collectors took fifty-two million dollars more.

It formerly was an accepted theory that taxes should be based on ability to pay. This apparently has been abandoned in favor of the theory that the less the railways earn the more they should be taxed.

Morning Motto

To feel much for others, and little for ourselves; to restrain our selfish, and exercise our benevolent affections, constitutes the perfection of human nature.—ADAM SMITH.

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, July 16.—Evening newspapers of one day last week, and morning papers following, carried two expressions of strong exasperation from President Roosevelt.

One was about a report, carried by the United Press, that Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of state, Mr. Cordell Hull, "disagreed." The "disagreement," which the report asserted, was over what action Mr. Roosevelt should take with respect to the decision of the Senate Foreign Relations committee not to take action on neutrality at this time.

take action on neutrality at this time.

This alleged disagreement, Mr. Roosevelt denied. He denied it, in person, over his own name, in strong words, at considerable length. He said the story was "wholly false." Mr. Roosevelt's indignation is understandable. To say, at a time like the present, that the president of the United States and his secretary of state "disagree," is a serious thing.

Harmony Necessary

Mr. Roosevelt's indignation may arise in part from a special circumstance. He may realize how necessary it is for him to give to the people of the United States a picture of complete harmony with Secretary Hull.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull have worked out a neutrality policy. This policy they are asking Congress to adopt. Much of Congress likes the policy. Much of the country likes it.

The policy would give a certain amount of power and discretion to the president. It would enable the president to carry out a course to which he has long committed himself with respect to possible war in Europe.

But many of the very persons who believe in this policy, and who think that the presidency of the United States, as an office, ought to have at all times some discretion in foreign relations—many of these same persons are uncomfortable about the use which the president now in office might make of this policy and this discretion. Such persons make a distinction between the policy as a policy, and the policy as Mr. Roosevelt might act under it. They think that Mr. Roosevelt is by temperament rather impetuous and headlong.

Highly Important

To such persons, agreement between Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of state, is highly important. Secretary Hull's reputation is one of patience, unflinching calm. Mr. Roosevelt receives, for his neutrality policy, much support which he might not receive if the policy was not known to be supported by Mr. Hull.

In this circumstance, Mr. Roosevelt may have done himself a disservice by the extreme vigor of his denunciation of the report of disagreement between him and his secretary. The manner of Mr. Roosevelt's denunciation suggests that he is a person who acts quickly and strongly upon provocation. And his action is likely to cause some to feel that in foreign relations he might be tempted to act in the same spirit in which he has just now acted.

On the same day as his expression of exasperation about a press report, Mr. Roosevelt gave out, or inspired, another, about another subject. One of his secretaries told the press, for publication, that the president was exasperated over delay by Congress in passing the regular District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Bill Delayed Unduly

The exasperation was explainable. The bill ought to have been passed July 1st. Because it was not, the employees of the District of Columbia faced a pay day without authorization for their pay, and the whole conduct of the municipal business of the City of Washington was inconvenienced or worse.

As respects Mr. Roosevelt, the effect of two public expressions of exasperation within a few hours may have increased the feeling that he is exceptionally subject to irritation, and to quick and drastic reaction to irritation. Yet it should not be forgotten that the primary blame in this District of Columbia incident is upon Congress.

Throughout the world, parliamentary government is in danger. In country after country the legislative branch of government has been extinguished, or reduced to practical nullity. The reason given in nearly all cases is that parliaments, Congresses, are inefficient; that they are slow, that they cannot act with the speed demanded by modern conditions. From this arises the assertion that one man government is more efficient, that dictatorship is made necessary.

That this attitude, already fatal to free and representative government in a large part of the world, may infect the United States, is this country's greatest danger. Already there are persons here who voice the same patter that has led to overthrow of free government elsewhere.

Rests on Congress

For resisting this danger, the largest responsibility is on Congress. It should continuously give to the country and to the world proof of its ability to function. What is involved in the present matter of the District of Columbia is a mere routine affair. Congress has been in session since January 3. At all times, it has known that the fiscal year ends June 30. That it should fail to pass one of the necessary appropriation bills before that date would be difficult to justify.

The dilatoriness of Congress on this point not only gives ammunition to those who claim that parliamentary government is inefficient. It weakens the public esteem for Congress, and thereby decreases the power of Congress to live up to one of its most useful functions, which is sometimes to refuse demands for legislation made by the president. For Congress to refuse assent to a measure asked by the president is one thing, and often a well-justified thing. To fail to pass on ordinary routine measure on time is a different thing.

Radio Is Still Held in Chains

By Hugh S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., July 16.—The new code for radio broadcasting treads dangerous ground. Censorship is censorship whether practiced by a jack-in-the-pulpit in a broadcasting studio or a more offensive one in a federal bureaucracy. Yet the radio chains are faced with a condition and not a theory. From a somewhat close acquaintance with the problem and notwithstanding a bitter suspicion of any kind of supervision of free speech except to punish libel, sedition or lewdness after the event—rather than censorship before it—I believe the code was necessary and that the finished job, with one important exception, is the best that could have been done.

The hot-spot is the ban on sponsored "controversial" utterance. This means that radio time cannot be bought to make political arguments except by the actual parties in political campaigns. Of course, if the people were thus to be cut off from sufficient discussion of both sides of their vital problems, this could be deadly dangerous.

Trying Earnestly

It is not enough for the radio companies to say that they will "give" as much time as they can afford to opposing political views. I know that they earnestly, honestly and courageously try to do that. Yet both time and facilities are limited. They can't afford to give much. Due to certain pressures presently to be mentioned, some discrimination is unavoidable.

If purchased time for controversial utterance is absolutely banned, what fair chance has any opposition against the political administration in power? The president, for example, goes on the radio with the most violent political partisanship gratis, and whenever he likes, and on the maximum possible number of stations. Who would dare deny him? Who could possibly get the same facilities to answer him—especially when any opportunity to answer is to be a matter not of right but of grace of the radio companies.

Not Unfettered

That "grace" is not unfettered. The broadcasting networks are in constant fear of the power of radio life and death in present federal controls. Commercially "sponsored" partisan replies were already a thing of the past before the code. No industrial company dares take advantage of the advertising value in a radio dog-fight. They are less afraid of an open and direct challenge by the federal government than an early visitation of "wholly collateral matters" by the Federal Trade Commission, the divisions of the anti-trust or income taxes—and many other Oppus. They have cause to fear.

The new broadcasting code would therefore be absolutely vicious except for a short saving clause which offers the only possible approach to this prickly problem—radio time may still be "sponsored" for radio debate in which both sides are represented with no advantage to either. That partly relieves the broadcasting companies from the charge of partisanship and also partly lightens the threat from political government to freedom of speech. If it could work out to restore to our political life the value of ancient tradition of debate in the Webster-Hayne and Lincoln-Douglas tradition, it could turn that threatened curse into a possible blessing.

Not Far Enough

But this only possible form doesn't go far enough. For if debate is the answer in purchasing programs, why isn't it the solution in donated programs? Why shouldn't it be as rigid a condition for giving radio time as for selling it, that every controversial political utterance by anybody from the president to Father Coughlin be coupled with its answer from some opposing champion with exactly the same facilities and publicity?

If something like that isn't done this code could spell the beginning of an era of aerial goose-stepping of public opinion. It practically prohibits partisan editorial comment on current news. If radio were like the press and some change were of one frankly announced political persuasion and their comment on the other, we could have opposing comment freely and the dangerous question wouldn't arise. But such is not the case. The question has arisen this code does not completely solve it. The only free forum for debate in our country remains the press.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

More Tribute—Fewer Jobs

FROM THE BEGINNING of the first Roosevelt administration, the hero worshipping attitude of the New York Post has been "the king can do no wrong."

This editorial fawning reached its high when the Senate voted, before the New Deal trade with the silverites, to end Treasury purchases of silver.

"We have been supporting the entire Mexican mining industry," the Post wailed, "by buying 5,000,000 ounces a month of Mexican silver, a by-product. The mining industry, in turn, has been paying half the costs of Mexican government in taxes. We have just kicked out this prop."

Right. Americans have been burdened with taxes to pay half the cost of the Mexican government, which, in turn, meant fewer jobs in the United States. Yet the Post deplores the ending of such a situation.

But the Post doesn't stop there. It proceeds to rebuke those Americans who resented Mexico's expropriation of American-owned oil fields. "We allowed ourselves the luxury of indignation," chides the internationally-minded Post. Then it goes on to commend the president's proposal to lend $500,000,000 to Latin American nations and asks Americans to give serious thought to this question: "Could a loan to Mexico be used to provide some payment to American owners of the oil fields?"

All of this sounds very strange from an American newspaper. Yet it is exactly the logical conclusion to which New Deal folly has led us.

It means simply this: crushing taxation that makes fewer jobs at home to pay a bounty to make more jobs abroad. And that bounty to be paid to a nation which has seized American property without compensation! But we shouldn't be indignant about that. We shouldn't slap Mexico on the wrist. Instead, we should pay her more tribute so that she may be able to pay for at least some of our property which she has stolen!

We wonder what our 11,000,000 unemployed think about this substitution of the New Deal creed for the American creed.

Bees and Autos

"HE DIED of injuries suffered when his auto crashed into a tree while he was trying to brush a bee from the car."

This, from the news columns, tells a story of what, with more or less tragedy, often happens this season of the year when bees are honey gathering.

It is well to remember these few rules if a bee, or any allied stinging insect, enters your car as you are driving:

First, the sting of a bee is not fatal. It doesn't hurt much more than a bite from a mosquito, though the subsequent pain and swelling are somewhat greater. Prompt application of ammonia, bicarbonate or baking soda or even wet mud—anything that is a strong alkali—will, to a great degree, counteract the effect of the acid injected by the bee's sting.

Second, don't get panicky. The bee in your car is just as frightened as you are and more anxious to get out than you are to oust it. The bee buzzes frantically on the windshield. Swatting at it with your hand or handkerchief only frightens it the more. Then in its darting about it may strike your face and sting.

This needless fear of a simple sting or the swatting which diverts your attention from managing the car may cause a fatal crash.

Third, if a bee gets in your car, steer over to the side of the road. Open both doors. The cross draft of air will carry the bee out or its own natural instinct to seek freedom will cause it to fly out. If you feel afraid, after you have opened the doors, get out yourself. The bee will probably fly out before you.

Then you may continue your journey in safety.

Matter of Habit, Probably

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, which is painstakingly efficient in the gathering of taxes if anything, has accused several New York night clubs of dodging income and other taxes, and has returned indictments against nine men and four corporations on charges ranging from failure to file returns to embezzlement.

The charges culminated six months of investigation during which the brow of many a boniface along the historic White Way of Gotham was furrowed with uneasiness as hawk-eyed federal agents dropped in repeatedly and unexpectedly, not to drink and be merry, but to scrutinize ledgers.

New York night clubs are so practiced in the art of gyping, that it would be no wonder to learn that they have been gyping the government.

As to Early Adjournment

CONGRESS can adjourn within about ten days if President Roosevelt does not insist on carrying the Senate fight over the Neutrality bill to a conclusion and on getting legislation authorizing all the various subdivisions of his new $3,860,000,000 spend-lead program.

A battle to the end on neutrality, it is evident, would last for months. Forty senators, it has been disclosed—perhaps a Senate majority if a showdown vote comes—are opposed to giving the president more power than he now possesses over traffic in munitions and implements of war, the use of which power might draw in the United States if war breaks out in Europe.

The stand of these senators reflects a growing public opinion in favor of a strictly American foreign policy. That would be a policy which, as far as possible, keeps the American government out of the game of international politics being played in Europe.

The breakdown of the spend-lead scheme into its parts has produced a crop of controversies. The workability of the plan is in question, together with the dubiousness of selling rafts of securities in the public markets which would be poorly supported by values but which, on account of the government's guarantee, might be salable. The new spending device seems necessarily another time-consuming subject, if a full legislative validation is sought.

The arguments for postponement until the 1940 session are good. The Neutrality bill would retain its present status, passed by the House and in the Senate Foreign Relations committee. While presidential politics will be hotter in 1940, the boiling point has already been reached. Congress now quitting, its wrangles would be out of the situation and business would have the months until next year to look around and find out where it stands.

Loser—Heads or Tails

THE PRESIDENT of a large corporation, in a recent report to stockholders on the company's heavy tax burden, said:

"It seems that we are running our business for the benefit of the government instead of for the benefit of our stockholders."

That was not over-statement. Treasury department figures show that over the twenty-one year span from 1916 to 1936 inclusive, tax payments have increased more than threefold.

Under the New Deal they have come to exceed actually the total of net income from all corporate activity available for stockholders.

In 1926, the tax gatherer took forty-six cents for each dollar of net income available for stockholders. In 1936, the latest year for which the Treasury statistics are available, he took $1.11 for each dollar of net income.

The figures are impressive as showing how New Deal policies have dried up the sources of recovery and killed incentive to invest or spend.

Why under the New Deal should "risk capital" come from hiding? If the risk fails, the investor loses. If it succeeds, the government wins.

Industrial Relations

"UNLESS government and the rank and file of labor unite on some intelligent program," writes a correspondent, "and unless that program is independent of politics and based on economic security for the employer as well as for the employee, the door will always be open to the chiseling type of labor leader."

There is a great deal of sound wisdom in this observation. The present disintegrated state of organized labor, with too many "big shots" engaged in all kinds of maneuvering for positions of advantage is conducive to racketeering and exploitation in their most aggravated forms.

Only by means of a disinterested governmental approach and an equally disinterested attitude on the part of outstanding labor leaders can there be attained the degree of stability requisite to secure and mutually beneficial industrial relations.

Britain and France think their giant joint display of air strength may bring the Fuehrer to his senses. It is in line with this new shock treatment for the mental case.

No one seems to know for sure what is going on in fantastic Louisiana. A theory is that the Mardi Gras is still running, as a form of government.

All the Baltic powder magazine needs now is a spark—something like a picture postcard from Danzig to Friend Adolf, saying "Wish you were here."

You can tell an amateur philanthropist. He is astonished when those he has benefited knock him.

That Guest Towel

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I've been watching one for six months and it's as immaculate as when it first came from the wash and the ironing board.

Perhaps it isn't same Guest Towel, or perhaps the Lady of the House takes it down occasionally and sends it to the laundry and puts it back again. But that doesn't alter the situation. The point I'm making is that no uncouth brute ever comes into that bathroom, runs the water over his hands, scrubs them vigorously, reaches for that prim little towel—and uses it.

And yet it isn't a formidable-looking object at all. It isn't a bit fancy. Even though it is so obviously what it is supposed to be—a Guest Towel.

But there's something about the thing that makes cowards of people. After all, it IS a Guest Towel. And Guest Towels, although I admit I have never used one, don't look absurd. They have a starched and stiff look that is subtly repellent. When a friend is in my home and wants to wash his hands, I go to the linen closet and pick up a little rough family hand-towel and say, "Here!" And he uses that thankfully. And when I'm in his house he does the same for me.

He knows better than to pull down the Guest Towel for me—his wife wouldn't mind, I suppose—but he doesn't do it, that's all. And neither do I. We know our stuff.

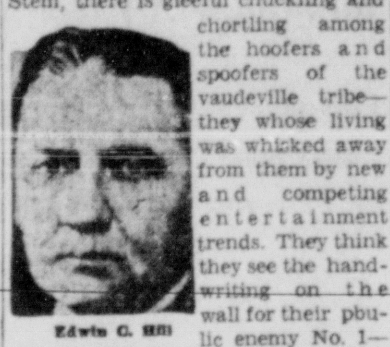

But some day I intend to break all precedents. I'll be in one of those spotless, don't-touch-a-thing households tyrannized over by one of those Perfect Housewives. And I'll go into her bathroom and wash my hands—and I won't wash them too clean, either—and with a grim look I'll reach out for one of those pretty tricks with embroidery in high relief or whatever you call it—and I'll USE IT! And I'll rumple it and I'll throw it in the dirty linen receptacle. . . . AND THE HEAVENS WILL FALL IN ON ME!

The windows will rattle. . . . and the cute little pink statue down on the parlor table will lift its eyes in astonishment. . . . and the sky will darken and thunder will roar from peak to peak and back again. . . . and all the terrified guests that ever looked furtively around a bathroom and then used their handkerchiefs will raise great shouts of triumph. . . . And I'll be sitting in the middle of all that wreckage I've made—with the most self-satisfied expression any of you ever saw on a man. . . . Just see if I don't!

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Up and down Broadway, or, as Mr. Winchell calls it, the Main Stem, there is gleeful chuckling and chortling among the hoofers and spoofers of the vaudeville tribe—they whose living was whittled away from them by new and competing entertainment trends. They think they see the handwriting on the wall for their public enemy No. 1—the moving pictures. It is as clear to them as was that projected light spot on the wall in Belshazzar's palace.

Television is going to put the movies right in the ash can—so say the show folk of the old Orpheum days. I find every bar and street corner up and down Broadway buzzing with that kind of talk. They firmly believe the movies are as dead as the Pat and Mike joke.

Better still, from their point of view, vaudeville suits television to a snail's heel. Some of the old-timers already are hooked up for workouts through the continuing experimental stages, and the profession is lit up with a new hope.

Has Definite Limit

To date, the televisioners are having trouble in catching a splayed out spectacle, such as baseball game or a great public ceremonial. As the television camera is today there is a definite limit to the spread of landscape, depth and swiftly changing focus which can be managed with it. The best results are obtained with fairly close-in shots, with the goings on safely in range, and under control, subject to repeated rehearsals if necessary—in short, studio work, and so far some form of vaudeville seems to come nearer to anything else in meeting these specifications.

The television people are convinced that they will have to offer something more exciting than a speaker or a singer. They are combining every field for possibilities and that is bringing out of the old midtown actors' boarding houses forgotten men and women who used to get top-billing in electric lights, fifteen or twenty years ago.

"Listen, Sam, that dude police-man act of mine had 'em rolling in the aisles. Olly Morosco comes around back and he says, 'Mel, he says, 'I want a big piece of you. I've got a spot for you in the biggest show anybody ever pulled around here and it means a stack of dough so big you couldn't run and jump over it.' Olly would have done it, too—but you know—he got all jammed up and then came those movies. But let me at this television—I'm set to see this Gilbert Seides next week and if I don't sell him an act—"

Blame Pictures

I was surprised to discover how almost unfailingly the vaudevilleans blame the moving pictures for their troubles. This hostility is more marked among the old trouper, who used to get their living from the road, rather than among the younger and less travelled entertainers. Their story is that it was the picture show monopoly of theatres in inland cities and towns, rather than better entertainment which put the short-turn specialties out of business. They are happily on fire with the idea that their old enemy is done for.

I have an idea that the movies are a pretty lively corpse and that television hasn't yet put on its seven-league boots. Technicians tell me there are tremendous problems still to be solved, and that the radio and movie magnates have no call to be losing any sleep. There is also to be noted the fact that the two latter are no longer gimcrack affair, and will not easily be dislodged from their hard-won place as purveyors of both information and entertainment, even by such a dazzling miracle as television.

England Makes Strides

Again, England, particularly, is making rapid progress in stepping up television for picture screen projection and it isn't impossible that the show folk will find television helping rather than hurting the picture houses. We don't want to be a kill-joy. I think most of us would welcome the oldtimers back

THEN THEY'RE NOT ALL EXTINCT

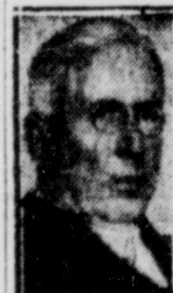

Roosevelt Irritation Seen As Likely To Produce an Undesirable Effect

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, July 16.—Evening newspapers of one day last week, and morning papers following, carried two expressions of strong exasperation from President Roosevelt.

One was about a report, carried by the United Press, that Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of state, Mr. Cordell Hull, "disagreed," which the report asserted, was over what action Mr. Roosevelt should take with respect to the decision of the Senate Foreign Relations committee not to Mark Sullivan takes action on neutrality at this time.

This alleged disagreement, Mr. Roosevelt denied. He denied it in person, over his own name, in strong words, at considerable length. He said the story was "wholly false."

Mr. Roosevelt's indignation is understandable. To say, at a time like the present, that the president of the United States and his secretary of state "disagree," is a serious thing.

Harmony Necessary
Mr. Roosevelt's indignation may arise in part from a special circumstance. It is for him to give to the people of the United States a picture of complete harmony with Secretary Hull.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull have worked out a neutrality policy. This policy they are asking Congress to adopt. Much of the country likes the policy. Much of the country likes it.

The policy would give a certain amount of power and discretion to the president. It would enable the president to carry out a course to which he has long committed himself with respect to possible war in Europe.

But many of the very persons who believe in this policy, and who think that the presidency of the United States, as an office, ought to have at all times some discretion in foreign relations—many of these same persons are uncomfortable about the use which the president now in office might make of this policy and this discretion.

Such persons make a distinction between the policy as a policy, and the policy as Mr. Roosevelt might act under it. They think that Mr. Roosevelt is by temperament rather impetuous and headlong.

Highly Important
To such persons, agreement between Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of state, is highly important. Secretary Hull's reputation is one of patience, surefooted calm. Mr. Roosevelt receives, for his neutrality policy, much support which he might not receive if the policy was not known to be supported by Mr. Hull.

In this circumstance, Mr. Roosevelt may have done himself a disservice by the extreme vigor of his denunciation of the report of disagreement between him and his secretary. The manner of Mr. Roosevelt's denunciation suggests that he is a person who acts quickly and strongly upon provocation. And his action is likely to cause some to feel that in foreign relations he might be tempted to act in the same spirit in which he has just now acted.

On the same day as his expression of exasperation about a press report, Mr. Roosevelt gave out, or inspired, another, about another subject. One of his secretaries told the press, for publication, that the president was exasperated over delay by Congress in passing the regular District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Bill Delayed Unduly

The exasperation was explainable. The bill ought to have been passed July 1st. Because it was not, the employees of the District of Columbia faced a pay day without authorization for their pay, and the whole conduct of the municipal business of the City of Washington was inconvenienced or worse.

As respects Mr. Roosevelt, the effect of two public expressions of exasperation within a few hours may have increased the feeling that he is exceptionally subject to irritation, and to quick and drastic reaction to irritation. Yet it should not be forgotten that the primary blame in this District of Columbia incident is upon Congress.

Throughout the world, parliamentary government is in danger. In country after country the legislative branch of government has been extinguished, or reduced to practical nullity. The reason given in nearly all cases is that parliaments, Congresses, are inefficient; that they are slow, that they cannot act with the speed demanded by modern conditions. From this arises the assertion that one man government is more efficient, that dictatorship is made necessary.

That this attitude, already fatal to free and representative government in a large part of the world, may infect the United States, is this country's greatest danger. Already there are persons here who voice the same patter that has led to overthrow of free government elsewhere.

Rests on Congress
For resisting this danger, the largest responsibility is on Congress. It should continuously give to the country and to the world proof of its ability to function. What is involved in the present matter of the District of Columbia is a mere routine affair. Congress has been in session since January 3. At all times, it has known that the fiscal year ends June 30. That it should fail to pass one of the necessary appropriation bills before that date would be difficult to justify.

The dilatoriness of Congress on this point not only gives ammunition to those who claim that parliamentary government is inefficient. It weakens the public esteem for Congress, and thereby decreases the power of Congress to live up to one of its most useful functions, which is sometimes to refuse demands for legislation made by the president. For Congress to refuse assent to a measure asked by the president is one thing, and often a well-justified thing. To fail to pass on ordinary routine measure on time is a different thing.

Something To Ponder

Undoubtedly most banks want to lend and are trying to lend. Many of them are trying to make loans on different kinds of security, but they are frequently subject to outmoded, unintelligent and officious examiner criticism.

Radio Is Still Held in Chains

By Hugh S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., July 16.—The new code for radio broadcasting trends dangerous ground. Censorship is censorship whether practiced by a jack-in-the-pulpit in a broadcasting studio or a more offensive one in a federal bureaucracy. Yet the radio chains are faced with a condition and not a theory.

From a somewhat close acquaintance with the problem and notwithstanding a bitter suspicion of any kind of supervision of free speech except to punish libel, sedition or lewdness after the event—I believe the code was necessary and that the finished job, with one important exception, is the best that could have been done.

The hot-spot is the ban on sponsored "controversial" utterance. That means that radio time cannot be bought to make political arguments except by the actual parties in political campaigns. Of course, if the people were thus to be cut off from sufficient discussion of both sides of their vital problems, this could be deadly dangerous.

Trying Earnestly

It is not enough for the radio companies to say that they will "give" as much time as they can afford to opposing political views. I know that they earnestly, honestly and courageously try to do that. Yet both time and facilities are limited. They can't afford to give much. Due to certain pressure presently to be mentioned, some discrimination is unavoidable.

If purchased time for controversial utterance is absolutely banned, what fair chance has any opposition against the political administration in power? The president, for example, goes on the radio with the most violent political partisanship gratis, and whenever he likes, and on the maximum possible number of stations. Who would dare deny him? Who could possibly get the same facilities to answer him—especially when any opportunity to answer is to be a matter not of right but of grace of the radio companies.

Not Unfettered

That "grace" is not unfettered. The broadcasting networks are in constant fear of the power of radio life and death in present federal controls. Commercially sponsored partisan replies were already a thing of the past before the code. No industrial company dares take advantage of the advertising value in a radio dog-fight. They are less afraid of an open and direct challenge by the federal government than an early visitation of "wholly collateral matters" by the Federal Trade Commission, the divisions of the anti-trust or income tax—and many other Oppus. They have cause to fear.

The new broadcasting code would therefore be absolutely vicious except for a short saving clause which offers the only possible approach to this prickly problem—radio time may still be "sponsored" for radio debate in which both sides are represented with no advantage to either. That partly relieves the broadcasting companies from the charge of partisanship and also partly lightens the threat from political government to freedom of speech. If it could work out to restore to our political life the valued ancient tradition of debate in the Webster-Hayne and Lincoln-Douglas tradition, it could turn the threatened curse into a possible blessing.

Not Far Enough

But this only possible formula doesn't go far enough. For if debate is the answer in purchased programs, why isn't the solution in donated programs? Why shouldn't it be as rigid a condition for giving radio time as for selling it, that every controversial political utterance by anybody from the president to Father Coughlin be coupled with its answer from some opposing champion with exactly the same facilities and publicity?

If something like that isn't done this code could spell the beginning of an era of aerial goose-stepping of public opinion. It practically prohibits partisan editorial comment on current news. If radio were like the press and some channels were of one frankly announced political persuasion and their competitors of another, we could have opposing comment freely and this dangerous question wouldn't arise. But such is not the case. The question has arisen this code does not completely solve it. The only free forum for debate in our country remains the press.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

CIO Charges Governor Holt With an "Usurpation of Power"

Offer of Support To Idle Miners Is Cause of Meeting

Democratic Party Leaders Asked "To Make Their Position Clear"

Charleston, W. Va., July 16 (AP)—The C.I.O. in West Virginia termed Governor Holt's offer of support to idle miners as non-union mines an "usurpation of power" today and called on Democratic party leaders to "make their position clear" in a matter.

The thirteen-member board of the West Virginia Industrial Union of Miners, embracing all the CIO unions in the state, sent copies of the resolution adopted at a Sunday session to members of the Democratic state committee.

The resolutions elicited criticism from the United Mine Workers, the CIO and some of their supporters. The last Wednesday when Holt sent letters to about 2,500 men at large non-union operations saying he had no disposition to insist that they work but if they did, and work was available at satisfactory terms "I shall not shirk my duty to see that you have an opportunity to work."

McKell Company Reopens
McKell Coal and Coke Company mines at Oswald and Tamroy resumed Thursday. Four operations of the Kingston-Poconongas Coal company at Kingston, Harwood, Springton and Hemphill remained closed and the company has made no announcement about reopening. Neither of these concerns has signed a "union shop" contract with the U.M.W.

The governor was visited last week by six miner delegations from the mines in question, three groups condemning him and three others praising him.

The CIO Council, headed by John E. Easton, said in its letter to the Democratic state committee: "We had believed that Governor Holt was the spokesman for the Democratic party in West Virginia, but now since he has turned his office into a strike-breaking agency, we cannot believe that he does speak for the Democratic party."

"We denounced his every action in regard to this miners' situation and we ask you, as a member of the State Democratic committee, whether or not you endorse his actions. We feel that all citizens of West Virginia are entitled to an explanation of the party leaders in regard to Governor Holt's position in this matter."

Board Criticizes Holt
The preamble of the resolution asserted that toward the end of the Appalachian wage conference in May the governor made a statement construed as an "invitation" to operators to refuse to sign a "union shop" wage contract.

Referring to last week's letter to miners, the resolution stated that "while the governor does not definitely state in his letter that he will guarantee police protection, he does infer that police protection would be given at all mines."

The board said: "We do hereby declare that Governor Holt's actions are uncalled for, an usurpation of power, an insult upon the honesty and integrity of the miners' union, and its officers, as well as the men to whom he sent the letters, and the operators who have already signed the agreement, that his actions border on treachery to the high office he holds, and an insult to the Democratic party of West Virginia."

Hit and Run Driver Kills State Trooper

Princeton, W. Va., July 16 (AP)—A hit-and-run driver killed a state trooper Harry Jeffries today by a hit-and-run driver Sheriff G. C. Crumpecker said today.

The 27-year-old Jeffries, riding a motorcycle, was struck by a car which veered to his side of the highway and hurled him into the path of a second automobile, the sheriff said.

A posse of between 200 and 300 men formed within 20 minutes and chased the car to a mountainside about a mile away and shortly afterward Deputy Sheriff C. C. Elmer made the arrest.

Crumpecker said Harold Conner, 36, of Princeton, was being held without formal charges and added that Conner had admitted he was the driver of the car.

Jeffries, a resident of Logan, died shortly after reaching a Princeton hospital.

Dead Surrenders

Staersville, W. Va., July 16 (AP)—Chief of Police George Lawson announced that Alfred Stead, who escaped from the Tyler county jail Sunday, surrendered and had been taken to Middlebourne.

Stead was named in an indictment charging participation in a series of bulk gasoline thefts, Lawson said.

Lonaconing Fire Fighters Plan For Convention

Members of Goodwill Department Begin Preparations for 1940

Lonaconing, July 16.—Immediately upon the return of the Goodwill Fire Company, No. 1, from the Maryland State Firemen's Association convention at Ocean City, tentative plans were being arranged for the 1940 meeting of the association here.

Goodwill's delegation to the convention, headed by Felix Foote, presented the invitation on the floor of a meeting at the Eastern Shore City, and was opposed by two other cities in Maryland, Salisbury and Oakland. Oakland withdrew entirely, but Salisbury withdrew in favor of the local group, with the hope of receiving the convention in 1941. Out of the five hundred and sixty votes at the meeting, the Lonaconing invitation received five hundred.

In receiving the 1940 convention, the local firemen, will now have been honored by the association five times since 1893. The first convention was held in Lonaconing in 1902, followed by another in 1911 and 1915. The last state meeting was held here in 1929.

Visit Camp

A group of parents and friends of members of the 4-H Club, were visitors to the 4-H camp on the last visitors day. Those attending were Mesdames Arthur Phillips, Winnie Stakem, Daniel Nolan, Margaret Arnold, Margaret Reed, Thomas Powers, Jack Williams, Sara Jane Gardner, Samuel McFarlane, Jack Ritchie, Jane Burt, Anne Sloan, Nellie Sloan, Barbara Jean Burt, Esther Kirkwood, Erma Cook, Marie Smith, Bertha Beeman, Ethel Alexander, Mrs. Ruth Dudley and Mrs. Jessie Miller.

Man Injured

Thomas "Mac" Holmes, 24, son of County Commissioner and Mrs. James T. Holmes, Douglas avenue, this place, was injured about the neck and back Friday, while at work near Spring Gap.

Mr. Holmes has been engaged in forestry work for the Department of Agriculture, and at the time of the accident was working with a crew of men in exterminating a blight on trees in the Spring Gap section. It is understood that a pole which had been placed between two trees to hold a guy rope, fell striking him on the back and neck.

He was removed to the Allegheny Hospital, Cumberland, by fellow workers, where his condition is reported as not serious.

CIO Charges Governor Holt With an "Usurpation of Power"

Offer of Support To Idle Miners Is Cause of Meeting

Democratic Party Leaders Asked "To Make Their Position Clear"

Charleston, W. Va., July 16 (AP)—The CIO in West Virginia termed Governor Holt's offer of support to idle miners at non-union mines an "usurpation of power" today and asked Democratic party leaders to "make their position clear" in a meeting.

The thirteen-member board of the West Virginia Industrial Union of Mill, embracing all the CIO unions in the state, sent copies of the resolution adopted at a Sunday meeting to members of the Democratic state committee.

The resolutions climaxed criticism from the United Mine Workers, the CIO and some of their supporters since last Wednesday when Holt sent letters to about 2,500 men at large non-union operations saying he had no disposition to insist that they work but if they did and work was available at satisfactory wages "I shall not shirk my duty to see that you have an opportunity to work."

McKell Company Reopens
McKell Coal and Coke Company mines at Oswald and Tamroy resumed Thursday. Four operations of the Kingston-Poconoke Coal Company at Kingston, Harwood, Lexington and Hemphill remained closed and the company has made no announcement about reopening. Neither of these concerns has signed a "union shop" contract with the CIO.

The governor was visited last week by six miner delegations from the mines in question, three groups condemning him and three others praising him.

The CIO Council, headed by John E. Easton, said in its letter to the Democratic state committee: "We had believed that Governor Holt was the spokesman for the Democratic party in West Virginia, but now since he has turned his office into a strike-breaking agency, we cannot believe that he does speak for the Democratic party."

"We denounced his every action in regard to this miners' situation and we ask you, as a member of the State Democratic committee, whether or not you will endorse his actions. We feel that all citizens of West Virginia are entitled to an explanation of the party leaders in regard to Governor Holt's position in this matter."

Board Criticizes Holt
The preamble of the resolution asserted that toward the end of the Appalachian wage conference in May the governor made a statement construed as an "invitation" to operators to refuse to sign a "union shop" wage contract.

Referring to last week's letter to miners, the resolution stated that while the governor does not definitely state in his letter that he would guarantee police protection, he does infer that police protection would be given at all mines."

The board said: "We do hereby declare that Governor Holt's actions are uncalled for an usurpation of power, an insult upon the honesty and integrity of the miners' union, and its officers, as well as the men to whom he sent the letters, and the operators who have already signed the agreement, that his actions border on treachery to the high office he holds, and an insult to the Democratic party of West Virginia."

Hit and Run Driver Kills State Trooper

Princeton, W. Va., July 16 (AP)—State Trooper Harry Jeffries was killed today by a hit-and-run driver on a highway near Princeton.

Mr. Crumpecker said was captured 30 minutes later by a posse.

The 27-year-old Jeffries, riding a motorcycle, was struck by a car which veered to his side of the highway and hurled him into the path of a second automobile, the sheriff said.

A posse of between 200 and 300 men formed within 20 minutes and placed the car to a mountainside about a mile away and shortly afterward Deputy Sheriff C. C. Elmore made the arrest.

Crumpecker said Harold Conner, Jr., of Princeton, was being held without formal charges and added that Conner had admitted he was the driver of the car.

Jeffries, a resident of Logan, died shortly after reaching a Princeton hospital.

Members of Goodwill Department Begin Preparations for 1940

Lonaconing, July 16.—Immediately upon the return of the Goodwill Fire Company, No. 1, from the Maryland State Firemen's Association convention at Ocean City, tentative plans were being arranged for the 1940 meeting of the association here.

Goodwill's delegation to the convention, headed by Felix Poote, presented the invitation on the floor of a meeting at the Eastern Shore City, and was opposed by two other cities in Maryland, Salisbury and Oakland. Oakland withdrew entirely, but Salisbury withdrew in favor of the local group, with the hope of receiving the convention in 1941. Out of the five hundred and sixty votes at the meeting, the Lonaconing invitation received five hundred.

In receiving the 1940 convention, the local firemen, will now have been honored by the association five times since 1893. The first convention was held in Lonaconing in 1902, followed by another in 1911 and 1915. The last state meeting was held here in 1929.

Persons Visiting Camping Area Must Register with Forest Guard

Petersburg, W. Va., July 16.—The Rangers Office of the United States Forest Service here has announced that the gates on Alleghany Mountain, near Dolly Dods and Brushy Run, have been opened. It has been possible to open the gates early this season because of the unusually heavy precipitation during the month of June.

Huckleberries are beginning to ripen and a crop heavier than usual is expected. Camping and smoking is permitted only within the improved camping areas. Persons going to this area are required to register with the Forest Guard at Red Creek Cabin. Persons are cautioned not to use fire for any purpose outside of the camping areas.

New Buildings

Isaac D. Smith has broken ground for the addition to the Coffman and Fisher store building on South Main street, consisting of about fifty additional feet in the rear of the present building now occupied by Coffman and Fisher. Wilson Deadrick and Bryan Shobe of Petersburg are in charge of the work.

W. E. Hill is making an improvement to the brick building on Virginia Avenue, known by older folks as the Dr. J. W. Kuykendall drug store, which was built about twenty-five years ago when he practiced here. It is understood that the meat shop of J. V. Davis will occupy the first floor and that offices will be made in the second floor. Grover Every has charge of this work.

The Etiquet of Business Calls

Calls at a business office, whether for business or pleasure, should be short.

If you call upon a person in his or her place of business, and find him busy, wait and let him finish whatever he may be doing.

If you are a business man and you have a woman caller at your office, it is correct for you to rise when she enters the room, just as you would if you were at home.

If you make a business call, make your remarks brief and to the point, but do not rush through them as if you have to make a train. State your case quickly and plainly.

Don't try to bluff your way past the reception desk of a business office. If you have a legitimate reason for admittance to an office you will be allowed to enter, but if you try to bluff, you will close the door against any future calls.

The Bridal Veil

Is it proper for a bride to wear a veil that covers the face? If so, who should raise the veil when bride and groom kiss? P. A. S.

It is permissible for the bride to wear a veil that covers her face, although it is not customary at present. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the maid of honor should help the bride to throw back the veil so that the bridegroom can claim his first kiss. If there are no attendants the bride herself may throw back her veil or her mother may help her.

Wedding Scene

Winter Haven, Fla. (AP)—A funeral-home reception room served as a wedding chapel for the marriage of Miss Lola Gaynell Lee, 19, and Robert S. Smith, 21. Deciding to be married immediately instead of at a later date originally selected, the young couple had the ceremony performed at the funeral home so the bride's father and brother, employees of the establishment, could attend.

But none of these things helped. The worry stayed with her. When Judy spoke she answered, but the words were meaningless.

In that moment, in the movie house, with boys eating peanuts just behind her, she knew that she loved Robert Kennedy. Loved him beyond all reason, all time and all place. Forever! Why, she did not know.

And as truly she realized that he had gone from her life. But one went on. Somewhere, sometime there must be a new horizon.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

IS THE SUIT SOLID?

SELDOM DOES a fine player make a pre-emptive bid if he has a hand which is of value at No Trump. The question which decides that point is usually whether the suit is solid or not. If it is, and is headed by top honors, it usually can be laid down for a long string of tricks at No Trump as soon as the partner gets the lead. Such bids are especially avoided if the hand contains a side ace or guarded king which may be used as an entry for the solid suit.

This deal was a case in which a fair player tried to prove the soundness of his original pre-emptive bid by showing what actually occurred. At a duplicate tournament, he bid 4-Spades on the South hand and made his 4-Spades. At other tables where South started with the correct bid of 1-Spade, the opponents got into the auction and arrived at 5-Hearts, which they could make.

Such reasoning does not constitute proof at all, simply because the pre-emptive bid worked out in this one case. Much more frequently, North would be found with a good enough hand to stop the run of any suit before the opponents had five tricks; and he could walk home with his eight Spade tricks. Just take the remaining cards of the deck, shuffle them into different hands and notice how much better you would come out in the long run, with those various holdings opposite, by bidding 1-Spade.

Greta Greens Are Going and We Will Likely Give Thanks

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Noted Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

A few weeks ago the staid old town of Alexandria, Va., much more aristocratic and "choosier" than its neighbor, Washington, D. C., was the hope of young people who sometimes "marry in haste and repent at leisure."

But a day or two ago the Alexandria city council adopted an ordinance requiring medical certificates of freedom from communicable disease as a prerequisite of marriage. This law will, of course, slow up speed-marriages. And in addition to the cost of the license, there will be the physician's fee for the certificate. All of which helps put another Greta Green out of business.

Nor is Alexandria alone in frowning upon the hasty marriage of people with communicable disease. A dispatch from Charleston, W. Va., a week or so ago, states: "The marriage license business has fallen off so much in this state that county clerks have to look at the calendar to make sure it's June—the traditional 'month of brides.'"

Recent Expense and Time

Since May 26, persons desiring marriage licenses have had to present a physician's certificate showing that they are free from social diseases in an infectious form. And it's not that the applicants for marriage licenses are afraid they can't pass the blood tests; it's that they resent the additional expense and the time involved.

The implication that there is any physical taint in their blood is resented by people who desire to marry. They feel their word should be taken for it without the insistence of an examination and a certificate from a physician. This applies to tuberculosis and other diseases as well as social diseases.

But how are we ever going to eradicate disease if people insist on becoming personal about such things? In European countries the control of diseases is far ahead of us, on account of legislation. Over there no one seems to feel that there is any degradation or implied indignity in the demand for health certificates. It's just a formality of the business of getting married.

Incorrigibly Romantic

No denying it, we Americans are an incorrigibly romantic people. We admit that marriage, children, and homes are the foundations of the State, and yet we try to evade one of the indispensable requisites of rugged health: Freedom from disease.

We seem to think that a certificate of good health would deprive marriage of all those charming frills which from time immemorial have been the right of the bride. Yet European countries while admitting the health certificate as indispensable, go in for many more charming wedding customs, some of which come down from the remote past, than we do.

Who doesn't recall the bridal procession wandering along country lanes and city streets, and in more remote districts the wedding company wearing their national costumes—if any such is left in this troublous world today.

So the United States, always a bit slow about changing its ways, is feeling grim over the falling off of its weddings. However, when we get used to the good common sense of a medical certificate, which is really a sort of long-life insurance, we probably accept it as we have accepted other remedial legislation, with thanks, after we finish kicking about it.

Madly in Love with Another

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm deeply in love with a girl of 18, whom I've taken out about six or eight times. She never refuses to go when I ask her, but she doesn't act overly-crazy about me. She is popular with both boys and girls, and never wants for company.

To make things worse, I've been going out with a girl a few months older than I am—20, and she tells me she's in love with me. She's a fine girl, but not for me. I just don't know what to do—try to win the first girl, or keep on with the one I'm going with now, and eventually marry her.

PATRICK

Why make any decision in regard to marriage at your age? You have plenty of time. And anyway, young man of your age, who can support a wife these days, must be making a pretty good salary. Why not keep on being friends with both of these girls, and see a little more of life before you come to any serious decision about a life partnership?

AH that new week Sarah Anne continued to practice her jumps. She became a heroine to the grade school pupils who flocked to the airport to watch her.

She and Judith made plans. There were to be some southern fairs that autumn, and they could enter. Sarah Anne would jump and Judith would pilot. They received a dozen offers and accepted them.

"A dollar a thrill," Judith said. "But an exciting way to make our living. That is, providing you always wear two parachutes. I'll never take you up if you don't. And no fancy stuff."

Sarah Anne realized that it was because she had been locked within herself for so long that now she could ruthlessly sweep away the boundaries and make this venture.

It wasn't her body that was hurting itself into space, seeking freedom alone. It was her mind, too, but no one else understood that.

The late summer was growing hot and heavy and the grass was withering in the lawns. It hadn't rained for a few weeks, and the flowers drooped, and the dust sifted through the screens and covered the chintzes and the shining old maple and mahogany.

Sarah Anne and Judy talked about the cool tang of the coming autumn, forgetting that they still would be warm in the south. That future was something viewed behind a curtain . . . not real, yet not imagined.

And through her days, Sarah Anne saw a tall young man with a lean, tanned face, walking slowly, or walking swiftly. He had no limp in her dreams. He was quite recovered, and he had flown away.

She went one night to a motion picture in a town where she and Judy were arranging for a parachute jump.

"One hundred dollars, that's fifty apiece," she had told Judy, who insisted that the greater part should be Sarah Anne's because she made the jumps.

"I'm the chauffeur and chauffeurs' rates are enough for me," the amber-eyed girl insisted.

The movie was a mediocre story of a boy who met a girl, left the girl, and came back to her.

News pictures followed it. Suddenly Sarah Anne was sitting forward in her seat. A candid camera had followed some aviators at an eastern meet, and in their midst, taller and more handsome than the others, stood Robert Kennedy.

The Etiquet of Business Calls

Calls at a business office, whether for business or pleasure, should be short.

If you call upon a person in his or her place of business, and find him busy, wait and let him finish whatever he may be doing.

If you are a business man and you have a woman caller at your office, it is correct for you to rise when she enters the room, just as you would if you were at home.

If you make a business call, your remarks brief and to the point, but do not rush through them as if you have to make a train. State your case quickly and plainly.

Don't try to bluff your way past the reception desk of a business office. If you have a legitimate reason for admittance to an office you will be allowed to enter, but if you try to bluff, you will close the door against any future calls.

The Bridal Veil

Is it proper for a bride to wear a veil that covers the face? If so, who should raise the veil when bride and groom kiss? P. A. S.

It is permissible for the bride to wear a veil that covers her face, although it is not customary at present. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the maid of honor should help the bride to throw back the veil so that the bridegroom can claim his first kiss, if there are no attendants the bride herself may throw back her veil or her mother may help her.

Wedding Scene

Winter Haven, Fla. (AP)—A funeral-home reception room served as a wedding chapel for the marriage of Miss Lola Gaynell Lee, 19, and Robert S. Smith, 21. Deciding to be married immediately instead of at a later date originally selected, the young couple had the ceremony performed at the funeral home so the bride's father and brother, employees of the establishment, could attend.

But none of these things helped. The worry stayed with her. When Judy spoke she answered, but the words were meaningless.

In that moment, in the movie house, with boys eating peanuts just behind her, she knew that she loved Robert Kennedy. Loved him beyond all reason, all time and all place. Forever! Why, she did not know.

And as truly she realized that he had gone from her life. But one went on. Somewhere, sometime there must be a new horizon. There must!

IS THE SUIT SOLID?

SELDOM DOES a fine player make a pre-emptive bid if he has a hand which is of value at No Trump. The question which decides that point is usually whether the suit is solid or not. If it is, and is headed by top honors, it usually can be laid down for a long string of tricks at No Trump as soon as the partner gets the lead. Such bids are especially avoided if the hand contains a side ace or guarded king which may be used as an entry for the solid suit.

This deal was a case in which a fair player tried to prove the soundness of his original pre-emptive bid by showing what actually occurred. At a duplicate tournament, he bid 4-Spades on the South hand and made his 4-Spades. At other tables where South started with the correct bid of 1-Spade, the opponents got into the auction and arrived at 5-Hearts, which they could make.

Such reasoning does not constitute proof at all, simply because the pre-emptive bid worked out in this one case. Much more frequently, North would be forced to run a good enough hand to the run of any suit before the opponents had five tricks; and then could walk home with his eight Spade tricks. Just take the remaining cards of the deck, shuffle them into different hands and notice how much better you would come out in the long run, with those various holdings opposite, by bidding 1-Spade.

Greta Greens Are Going and We Will Likely Give Thanks

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Noted Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

A few weeks ago the staid old town of Alexandria, Va., much more aristocratic and "choosier" than its neighbor, Washington, D. C., was the hope of young people who sometimes "marry in haste and repent at leisure."

But a day or two ago the Alexandria city council adopted an ordinance requiring medical certificates of freedom from communicable disease as a prerequisite of marriage. This law will, of course, slow up speed-marriages. And in addition to the cost of the license, there will be the physician's fee for the certificate. All of which helps put another Greta Green out of business.

Nor is Alexandria alone in frowning upon the hasty marriage of people with communicable disease. A dispatch from Charleston, W. Va., a week or so ago, states: "The marriage license business has fallen off so much in this state that county clerks have to look at the calendar to make sure it's June—the traditional 'month of brides'."

Resent Expense and Time Since May 26, persons desiring marriage licenses have had to present a physician's certificate showing that they are free from social diseases in an infectious form. And it's not that the applicants for marriage licenses are afraid they can't pass the blood tests; it's that they resent the additional expense and the time involved.

The implication that there is any physical taint in their blood is resented by people who desire to marry. They feel their word should be taken for it without the insistence of an examination and a certificate from a physician. This applies to tuberculosis and other diseases as well as social diseases.

But how are we ever going to eradicate disease if people insist on becoming personal about such things? In European countries the control of diseases is far ahead of us, on account of legislation. Over there no one seems to feel that there is any degradation or implied infidelity in the demand for health certificates. It's just a formality of the business of getting married.

Incorrigibly Romantic No denying it, We Americans are an incorrigibly romantic people. We admit that marriage, children, and homes are the foundations of the State, and yet we try to evade one of the indispensable requisites of rugged health: Freedom from disease.

We seem to think that a certificate of good health would deprive marriage of all those charming frills which from time immemorial have been the right of the bride. Yet European countries while admitting the health certificate as indispensable, go in for many more charming wedding customs, some of which come down from the remote past, than we do.

Who doesn't recall the bridal procession wandering along country lanes and city streets, and in more remote districts the wedding company wearing their national costumes—if any such is left in this troublous world today.

So the United States, always a bit slow about changing its ways, is feeling grim over the falling off of

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm deeply in love with a girl 18, whom I've taken out about six or eight times. She never refuses to go when I ask her, but she doesn't ask over-crazy about me. She is popular with both boys and girls, and never wants for company.

To make things worse, I've been going out with a girl a few months older than I am—20—and she tells me she's in love with me. She's a fine girl, but not for me. I just don't know what to do—try to win the first girl, or keep on with the one I'm going with now, and eventually marry her.

PATRICK.

Why make any decision in regard to marriage at your age? You have plenty of time. And anyway, a young man of your age, who can support a wife these days, must be making a pretty good salary. Why not keep on being friends with both of these girls, and see a little more of life before you come to any serious decision about a life partnership?

Marian Martin

Those extra pounds just won't matter when you slip into this magic skirt. With typical Marian Martin skill, Pattern 9117 slims and smooths and softens and conceals, all with the greatest of style and femininity. The skirt, many gored in front and single seamed in back, is carefully planned for slender hip and thigh lines. But high honors go to the bodice. A gently scalloped yoke curves gracefully across the front, with gathers beneath to release wonderful softness. And a rippling jabot, pretty in lace or dainty eyelet embroidery, is used to conceal a heavy bust. Lacy trim adds a dressed-up note.

Pattern 9117 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48. Size 36 requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric, ¾ yard contrast and 4½ yards lace edging.

Send Fifteen Cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

NEXT MARYLAND ATTRACTION

roles; presenting six brand new songs by Irving Berlin; dazzling with Sonja Henie's sensational ice tangos and snow rumbas, which she performs with a skating partner for the first time on the screen; depicting the new ballroom dance craze, the "Back to Back" — it's enough to leave you breathless, and it does! It also left this reviewer happy and entertained to the hilt.

The screen play by Harry Tugend, based on a story by George Bradshaw, has been skillfully directed, so that the most is made of an appealing and realistic tale. Sonja, a Minnesota schoolmarm and candidate No. 436 for the role of the heroine in the picturization of a best-seller, gets the role and is brought to Hollywood by Publicity Man Tyrone Power to make the picture. There, for purposes of publicity, Tyrone arranges a romance between the new find and Rudy Vallee, who plays a matinee idol. Here a John Alden-Miles Standish theme enters to complicate matters. The whole thing is lavishly illustrated and highlighted by the melodic new Berlin numbers, which are: "I'm Sorry for Myself," "An Old Fashioned Tune Always Is New," "When Winter Comes," "Song of the Metronome," "I Poured My Heart Into a Song" and "Back to Back." From the latter Harry Loebe, who staged Sonja's amazing skating ensembles, arranged the new step that will replace the Lambeth Walk to the plush album of yesteryear.

Red Nichols Says Join a
Band and See the World

Red Nichols, celebrated orchestra leader of "Five Pennies" fame, is the authority for the statement that youth of the country can best see the world by joining an orchestra instead of the army. The world-traveling maestro who brings his orchestra to Crystal Ballroom Thursday evening, almost found himself in a uniform after finishing prep school. Instead, he picked up the trumpet rather than an appointment for West Point.

Since young Nichols left Culver Military Academy he has seen much of America, has been featured in Broadway musical reviews, featured on the networks and a favorite on personal appearance engagements. Yes, sir, Nichols agrees, "Join a band and see the world."

Red Nichols and his famous orchestra come to Crystal after eight months of touring. Early this season they were selected to open at Topsy's Cafe in Hollywood, a rendezvous of the movie stars, proving so popular with the colony that he remained there three months. Then a tour of one night engagements, to the Meadowbrook Country Club in New

SKATING PARTNERS

Sonja Henie, with her first screen skating partner, Stewart Reburn, performs spectacular ice tangos and snow rumbas in Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle" now showing at the Strand Theatre, the 20th Century-Fox film stars Sonja with Tyrone Power, features Rudy Vallee and Edna May Oliver, introduces six new Berlin songs.

Jersey, and then to New York City for recordings. Back to Kansas City and St. Louis. Then to the Lowry hotel in St. Paul where an engagement of one week was extended to six. The Greyhound Club at Louisville, Kentucky, Springlake Park at Oklahoma City, Blue Moon at Wichita, Yacht Club at Tulsa; and other well known stands have been played leading into this territory.

Hawks' Film Set Supplies
70-Mile Gale

"Turn on the weather!" And a 70-mile gale bent jungle trees double, whipped the palm-thatched roofs of native huts and shook "the Dutchman's" cantina to its timbers while a vivid-hued macaw clung desperately to its perch. Rain poured down in drenching abandon so that the mud underfoot disappeared in rushing gullies quickly formed.

And Cary Grant and Jean Arthur slogged their way through the storm to enact dramatic and thrilling scenes for "Only Angels Have Wings," which Howard Hawks produced and directed for Columbia. The film, now at the Maryland Theatre, is a tempest-tossed drama of tropical romance and adventure. Among the items responsible for the realism of the made-to-order thunder-storm was the use of a network of 4000 feet of sprinkling pipes installed under the studio roof, capable of pouring 1400 gallons of water per hour on the picturesque, tropical setting of a South American seaport. A caterpillar pipe 42 inches in diameter served to furnish the wind. A giant blowing machine outside a five-foot fan sucked the air and sent it through the caterpillar at a velocity ranging from 15 to 75 miles per hour.

In the scenes with Grant and Miss Arthur were Richard Barthelmess, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Noah Beery, Jr., Allyn Joslyn, Sig Ruman and numerous others.

Claude Rains Had Week
To Turn From Hero To Bum

One week after Claude Rains was a hero and a patriot he became a scoundrel and a spendthrift, albeit a likeable one. And the latter role was the most enjoyable he has had since he entered motion pictures in 1933, he says.

As a hero, Rains played Haym Salomon, the man who helped finance George Washington's ragged Continentals through their darkest days. Salomon is the central character in the four-reel Warner Bros. Technicolor film, "Sons of Liberty." As a scoundrel, Rains played Jim Masters in "Daughters Courageous," the Warner Bros. domestic comedy currently showing at the Liberty Theatre. He is the husband who walked out on Fay Bainter years ago, and who casually returns to his wife and their four children in an attempt to barney his way back into the family circle.

"I'm a bum in this role, but a charming bum at that," Rains explains. "Ice Follies of 1939"
And "Big Town Czar"

Hitting a new high in entertainment "The Ice Follies of 1939," starring Joan Crawford with James Stewart, Lew Ayres and Lewis Stone, opened a three-day engagement starting yesterday at the Embassy Theatre.

"The Ice Follies of 1939" contains the happy combination of plot, extravaganza and some of the best tunes to come out of Hollywood this season. It features Joan Crawford in the type of role which sky-rocketed her to screen fame, and in addition introduces her to audiences as a new find in film songstress.

The story centers about Mary McKay, a singing ice skater who, through a series of strange twists of fate, finds herself on the top rung of the ladder to film fame. Her quick ascent, however, leaves husband Jimmie Stewart behind and the manner in which the two are finally reunited supplies plenty of punch to the dramatic action of the story.

"Step right up and hate me, folks," invites Frank Jenks, film comedian who turns "rat" in Universal's "Big Town Czar," now playing at the Embassy Theatre. Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Ed Sullivan, Walter Woolf King, Jack LaRue, Jerry Marlowe and Gordon Jones are featured.

Jenks started his screen career as a "heavy," then turned to comedy, the field in which he has enjoyed success.

Japan's Income Taxes Rise As War Goes On

Tokyo (AP)—Income tax returns in Japan for 1938 showed that leading Japanese businessmen are getting along nicely, despite the China war. Records placed Baron Hisaya Iwasaki, head of a great industrial family with interests in banking, shipping, and manufacturing, at the top. He paid approximately $900,000. Baron Takakimi Mitsui, head of Japan's biggest industrial and financial group, was second with approximately $660,000.

An unprecedented number of industrialists, the majority connected with munitions making, climbed into the high-tax class.

The increase of national income brought 100,000 more people into the taxable brackets in 1938.

Banish Color Fears!

By HELEN FOLLETT

TIME WAS when the majority of women suffered from color fear. Black, characterless browns, all the drab tones were considered highly respectable. Black is still the favorite of many, being especially becoming to blondes and redheads with fresh, young complexions, but the washed out tones are taking a back seat. For which we should be grateful. Look dismal! and you'll feel that way. Women used to wear mourning for years and years. It was a horrible practice. In many ways this world is getting to be a better place for a woman.

Red is fashionable this year, though it is a warm color for hot weather and for that reason many of us avoid it. But it is making flaming youths of some who will be cheered by the gay influence. When wearing red, purple or any of the lavender shades, you have to mind your lipstick. A cerise frock and vermilion lips kick up a color war that puts a girl out of the running.

Only for Young

Pastel shades, also popular, are only for the young 'uns. They make the faded beauty look even more faded, especially the light-headed sisters.

When buying material for a gown, wrap it around your shoulders, note the effect upon eyes and complexion. If the robe is gay, tone down the accessories—gloves, stockings, shoes, chapeau and purse. One can stand so much color and no more. Good taste is the director; it never makes a mistake.

ARLEEN WHELAN... has no color fear, but chooses frocks wisely.

GARDEN-GRAPH

Transplanting Ferns Successfully

Ferns may be transplanted at any time of year, even during mid-summer. This is perhaps the most suitable time, as they have reached maturity and the gardener can see their height and form.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, those ferns which have a short, thick rootstock should be transplanted with at least two inches of old rootstock attached to the crown so that the plant is not starved by lack of rootlets. Also leave the dead last-year's stalks attached. In this group are the Woodferns, Christmas Fern and Ostrich Fern.

Do not move fern from a moist, shady situation to a sunny one. Ferns are not adaptable and even nursery stock must be maintained in its natural habitat.

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Cucumbers, melons, cabbage and squashes are very apt to be attacked by leaf-eating bugs at this time. A spray of arsenate of lead should be applied so that both sides of the leaf are coated.

Shrubs may be propagated this month using greenwood cuttings. It is worth while to try one of the hormone preparations now on the market as a means of hastening and stimulating root development. This treatment is important in commercial nursery practice, but amateur gardeners will also find it useful.

On dwarf polyantha trees, all the pruning necessary is to cut back the faded blooms to the first leaf and the plants will continue to bloom right up until frost.

During dry weather dahlias and gladioli should be kept well-watered. Since the quality of the bloom will suffer if the plants are allowed to get too dry.

All the vines, trained or dwarfed fruit trees and plants trained on walls should be watched and pruned or trained often and carefully instead of severely at long intervals. A little pinching back now is often all they need.

Keep your pansy plants watered, and if they threaten to stop producing buds try cutting them back. Pick pansy flowers regularly, for if you allow them to form seed-pods, the plants will stop blooming.

A special feature of cold reaction was pointed out by research workers at the Mayo clinic several years ago. Certain people have very definite and quite alarming reactions to chilling of the body surface, especially chilling by cold water. It seems to be a hypersensitiveness which affects the small blood vessels. They may not be aware of their own bodily peculiarity and during childhood do not have the opportunity of ocean or lake bathing. When they get into cold water for the first time, they may have a violent reaction immediately which causes faintness and unconsciousness. In a highly-developed case, a simple test will detect the condition: Immersion of the hand in a pan of water at the temperature of 50 degrees will cause blanching and numbness of an unnatural degree.

I think a note should be made here also about exposure to the sun. It is not by any means universally and always healthy. The sun can make you very sick. I have seen hardened Californians get sun sick, even when they have been used to exposure for a whole season. The vacationist with only two weeks for recreation should not try for a complete tan the first few days or it may result in spoiling the vacation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 16 cents. For any one pamphlet desired send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of King Features Syndicate, Inc., 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York, N. Y. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Hygienic," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Casper, Wyo. (AP)—Entomologists say they've discovered a way to "tickle" Mormon crickets to death. They spray the insects with poison powder that causes a ticklish feeling; the insect scratches himself to relieve the tickle. In scratching he gets poison on his feet and he sticks them into his mouth to suck off the dust specks.

Result: he gets enough poison to kill him. The system is being used widely in Wyoming and Montana where crickets threaten to destroy crops. A machine spreads a swath of poison 24 feet wide in one trip across a field; covers 100 acres a day.

roles; presenting six brand new songs by Irving Berlin; dazzling with Sonja Henie's sensational ice tangos and snow rhumbas, which she performs with a skating partner for the first time on the screen; depicting the new ballroom dance craze, the "Back to Back" — it's enough to leave you breathless, and it does! It also left this reviewer happy and entertained to the hilt.

The screen play by Harry Tugend, based on a story by George Bradshaw, has been skillfully directed, so that the most is made of an appealing and realistic tale. Sonja, a Minnesota schoolmarm and candidate No. 436 for the role of the heroine in the picturization of a best-seller, gets the role and is brought to Hollywood by Publicity Man Tyrone Power to make the picture. There, for purposes of publicity, Tyrone arranges a romance between the new find and Rudy Vallee, who plays a matinee idol. Here a John Alden-Miles Standish theme enters to complicate matters. The whole thing is lavishly illustrated and highlighted by the melodic new Berlin numbers, which are: "I'm Sorry for Myself," "An Old Fashioned Tune Always Is New," "When Winter Comes," "Song of the Metronome," "I Poured My Heart Into a Song" and "Back to Back."

From the latter Harry Losee, who staged Sonja's amazing skating ensembles, arranged the new step that will relegate the Lambeth Walk to the plush album of yesteryear.

Red Nichols Says Join a
Band and See the World

Red Nichols, celebrated orchestra leader of "Five Pennies" fame, is the authority for the statement that youth of the country can best see the world by joining an orchestra. Instead of the army, The world-traveling maestro who brings his orchestra to Crystal Ballroom Thursday evening, almost found himself in a uniform after finishing prep school. Instead, he picked up the trumpet rather than an appointment for West Point.

Since young Nichols left Culver Military Academy he has seen much of America, has been featured in Broadway musical reviews, featured on the networks and a favorite on personal appearance engagements. Yes, sir, Nichols agrees, join a band and see the world.

Red Nichols and his famous orchestra come to Crystal after eight months of touring. Early this season they were selected to open at Topsy's Cafe in Hollywood, a rendezvous of the movie stars, proving so popular with the colony that he remained there three months. Then a tour of one night engagements, to the Meadowbrook Country Club in New pipes, installed under the studio roof, capable of pouring 1400 gallons of water per hour on the picturesque, tropical setting of a South American seaport. A caterpillar pipe 42 inches in diameter served to furnish the wind. A giant blowing machine outside a five-foot fan sucked the air and sent it through the caterpillar at a velocity ranging from 15 to 75 miles per hour.

In the scenes with Grant and Miss Arthur were Richard Barthelmess, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Noah Beery, Jr., Allyn Joslyn, Sig Ruman and numerous others.

Claude Rains Had Week
To Turn From Hero To Bum

One week after Claude Rains was a hero and a patriot he became a scoundrel and a spendthrift, albeit a likeable one. And the latter role was the most enjoyable he has had since he entered motion pictures in 1933, he says.

As a hero, Rains played Haym Salomon, the man who helped finance George Washington's ragged Continentals through their darkest days. Salomon is the central character in the four-reel Warner Bros. Technicolor film, "Sons of Liberty."

As a scoundrel, Rains played Jim Masters in "Daughters Courageous," the Warner Bros. domestic comedy currently showing at the Liberty Theatre. He is the husband who walked out on Fay Bainter years ago, and who casually returns to his wife and their four children in an attempt to blarney his way back into the family circle.

"I'm a bum in this role, but a charming bum at that," Rains explains. "Even though the story tells you that Jim Masters has been everywhere he oughtn't, and done everything he shouldn't, Fay Bainter and the four children, and even the audience itself, for that matter, can't help having a certain liking for the irresponsible fellow. He never pretends to be other than he really is, you see, and that is very disarming."

Bees Beat Reds Twice But Lose Shortstop

Eddie Miller Is Hurt in Clash With Simmons

Collide When Chasing Fly Ball Hit by Bill Werber

Reds Drop only Half Game Lead as Giants Lose to Cards

Boston, July 16 (AP)—The Boston Bees swept a doubleheader today from the first-place Cincinnati Reds before their biggest home crowd of the season—but lost their star shortstop perhaps for the rest of the season.

Nearly 30,000 persons saw the second division Bees smack the Reds 3 to 0, in the opener and then come from behind twice to capture the nightcap, 4 to 3, for their 16th victory in 21 starts.

The Reds' hold on first place, however, was cut only a half-game as the New York Giants dropped a single game to St. Louis. Cincinnati is out front by six games.

Cincinnati got off to a good start in the nightcap with two runs in the third, doubles by Werber and McCormick being the big runs in the attack, but the Bees came back in the fourth to tie it up. Cincinnati put one run over in the seventh but Boston promptly scored two to clinch matters.

How to Beat the Yankees
Still Mystery to Cronin

By JOHN LARDNER
(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, July 16—Review of the week's baseball, translated from the Norwegian of Henrik Ibsen: Victor over the New York Yankees in five straight games, Joe Cronin, popular young Boston manager, told a meeting of American League leaders this week that there was nothing to it.

"You just give them this," said Mr. Cronin, "and then you give them this."

"What do you do first?" asked James J. Dykes, Chicago genius, who beat the Yankees once back in June, or was it May?

"You pitch to them," explained Mr. Cronin.

"With what?" inquired Mr. Fred Haney, of the Browns, who whipped the Yankees mercilessly one time in ten starts.

"If you haven't got the pitchers, you outslug them," said Mr. Cronin patiently.

What Is a Slugger?

"How is that done?" said Stanley Harris, of Washington. "What is a slugger? A guy who hits over 280?"

I've got one of those. At least, I did have, the last time I looked at the averages."

"You beat 'em with balance," said Mr. Cronin, reaching for the water-pitcher. "You outfield 'em."

"That ought to be easy," said Mr. Dykes. "They have no fielders except Dahlgren, Gordon, Crossett, Rolfe, Di Maggio, Heinrich, and a couple of other guys."

"You play to their weakness," said Mr. Cronin, mopping his brow.

"Where is that?" demanded Oscar Vitt. "In the dressing room? They tell me Di Maggio can't tie a bow-tie worth a darn."

"You boys don't seem to understand," said Mr. Cronin, reaching for his hat and looking for the door.

"You just give 'em this, and then you give 'em this."

Pressed for details soon afterward, Mr. Cronin admitted that he was not exactly clear on how the whole thing happened.

"I'll remember the combination the next time we meet 'em," he said. "I hope I will," added Mr. Cronin in a low mutter.

Gabby Hartnett, peerless leader of the National League All-Stars, announced that he was considering a police investigation of two episodes in the all-star game.

"I make no charges and name no names as yet," said the fustier, "but it is pretty obvious that there was funny business. Three Japanese tumblers, nice fellows, all of them, have informed me that the stop which Joe Gordon made off of Medwick was impossible. It can't be done, and I have affidavits to prove it."

A Peculiar Third Strike

"As for the third strike which Feller threw to Stan Hack, ending the game, that was most peculiar. It was wide, wasn't it, Stanley?"

"What do you mean, wide?" said Mr. Hack. "He never threw it at all. Magerkurth just thought he saw it. My eyes are as good as Magerkurth's boss's."

"Well," said Mr. Hartnett philosophically, "Joe McCarthy is over in the other league and he tells me that you can never be sure whether Feller is throwing them or not. We will wait and see what the investigation turns up."

In a spirit of discipline, Mr. Haney, manager of the Browns, levied fines of $25, $50 and $25 this week upon Bill Trotter, Howie Mills, and Myril Hoag, respectively.

"If they think it is fun to be a Brown," Mr. Haney said, "I'll show 'em."

"What gives you the idea that they think it is fun to be a Brown?" inquired the interviewer.

"Well," said Mr. Haney thoughtfully, "I've seen 'em smile. Maybe it was something they ate, but I'm taking no chances. Browns do not smile unless they have devilment in their hearts."

Mr. Donald Barnes, owner of the St. Louis club, when he recovered from the shock of seeing $100 in one bunch, announced that he would buy two starting pitchers.

"I believe in putting the profits back in the business," said Mr. Barnes.

Doc Prothro indicated that the new deal among the Phillies is here to stay, when he refused to concede the pennant last week.

"I concede nothing," said the iron-headed Philadelphia manager. "There is nothing wrong with the Phils that a catatym won't cure."

Interclub Golf Match
At Ft. Cumberland July 23

The first inter-club match of the 1939 season for the Fort Cumberland Golfers will be held Sunday, July 23, when a 12 man team from Oakland will come to Cumberland for a match. The personnel of the Fort Cumberland team will be made public within a few days.

The management of the Fort Cumberland club announced yesterday that beginning this week, Wednesday of each week will be ladies' day at the club and there will be no charge for ladies to play on Wednesdays.

Another event scheduled for the Fort Cumberland club is a Round Robin tournament which will get under way July 23. Full information can be obtained at the Club House.

Giants Start Aug. 12

New York, July 16—The New York Giants, professional football champions, have been ordered to report to Superior, Wis., Aug. 12, to begin training for the game with the College All-Stars, Aug. 30, at Soldiers' Field, Chicago.

Reds Drop only Half Game Lead as Giants Lose to Cards

Boston, July 16 (AP)—The Boston Bees swept a doubleheader today from the first-place Cincinnati Reds before their biggest home crowd of the season—but lost their star shortstop perhaps for the rest of the season.

Nearly 30,000 persons saw the second division Bees smack the Reds 3 to 0, in the opener and then come from behind twice to capture the nightcap, 4 to 3, for their 16th victory in 21 starts.

The Reds' hold on first place, however, was cut only a half-game as the New York Giants dropped a single game to St. Louis. Cincinnati is out front by six games.

Shortstop Eddie Miller of the Bees collided with Al Simmons in the seventh inning of the second game when they both ran after Bill Werber's fly into left field. Miller broke a bone above the ankle of his left leg.

Cincinnati got off to a good start in the nightcap with two runs in the third, doubles by Werber and McCormick being the big runs in the attack, but the Bees came back in the fourth to tie it up. Cincinnati put one run over in the seventh but Boston promptly scored two to clinch matters.

Wellsburg Nine Tops Garrett Sluggers, 10-7

In a baseball game at Garrett yesterday, the Wellsburg nine won a 10-7 verdict over the home team although outlasted seventeen to thirteen. In a very free-hitting game, the stickwork of rookie shortstop Joe Wagner of the Wellsburg team was outstanding. He collected a triple, three singles and a walk to chalk up a perfect day at bat besides handling six chances without a slip for his debut. For Garrett the offensive was carried by Weaver, Hoskins and Fullerton.

Phillies Split Doubleheader with Pittsburgh Pirates

Celebrate "Morrie Aronovich" Day by Winning First Game 3 to 2

Philadelphia, July 16 (AP)—The Phillies celebrated "Morrie Aronovich" day today by splitting a doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Phillies snared the first game, 3 to 2, behind the seven-hit pitching of Hugh Mulahy and dropped the second, 7 to 3, when the Pirates bunched four hits, two bases on balls and two errors, for six runs in the seventh.

Coney Upsets Midland 10-5 in Bi-State Tilt

In one of the biggest upsets of the season the Lonaconing team of the Bi-State League gave the league leading Midland Red Sox a 10-5 drubbing. Although outlived ten to seven the Coney nine came through in the clutch and scored enough to win the tussle hands down.

Ternent started on the rubber for Coney and gave up six hits in three and a third innings. He was replaced by Thomas who carried on from there and received credit for the win. Coney scored all of its runs after the third inning, bunched hits in the fourth and fifth when it scored four and five respectively, and in the seventh when it got the final tally.

The hitting of Cameron who got two for four paced the Coney outfall while Drew and Porta with the same count led the Red Sox. B. McKenzie, catcher for the Lonaconing nine, pounded out a homer in one of his two times at bat.

With wins over Hutton's and Martin's, the Vandergriff Vandals finished the week's play with a two game lead in the Ridgeley Softball League.

Vandergriff trounced the second place Hutton Hustlers 11-0 with H. Nestor leading the hitting with his three blows, while J. Nestor, Simpson, Moreland and Simmons had two each.

H. Nestor had a triple and a double. The Vandals won their second game when they defeated Martin's 15-5. Deatlehauser, who relieved Diehl in the first inning allowed only three hits. Evans smacked out a home run, Zimmerman and Carr smashed triples and Murrell placed a double for the extra base hits in the game. J. Nestor, H. Nestor, Zimmerman, and Duer each had two hits for the winners.

Martin's defeated Borror's 6-5 although the winners were outlived. Phillips of Borror's led the batting with two safe hits. Playing off a postponed game, Martin's defeated Borror's 8-4. Hutton's made eight errors to help Borror's score an upset victory 12-7 as Grim, Hutton, moundman, hit two home runs and a single to try to save the game. He also struck out three batters in a row. Cline had a triple and a single to lead the winners. The scores:

Hyndman Wins 5 to 4 over Frostburg in Bi-State

Hyndman had a big third inning and knocked off Frostburg in their Bi-State loop game at Hyndman yesterday, 5 to 4. With the count tied at one-one Bruner opened the third to be safe on an error at short. Green and Porter singled in succession and Mangus managed a walk to force Bruner home. Paul Clapper's single drove in Green and Porter and Fred Clapper followed with another single to send in the final, and what proved winning tally.

Frostburg scored again in the fifth and A. Scall slammed a homer in the eighth with a mate aboard to account for Frostburg's last three markers.

Grove Limits Detroit to Six Hits; Sox Win 12th Straight

Detroit, July 16 (AP)—The thundering Boston Red Sox won their eleventh and twelfth straight victories to stick six games behind the leading New York Yankees as they swept both ends of a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers today. The scores were 9 to 2 and 3 to 0.

Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove went the route for Boston in the first game and held Detroit to six hits. He got a lift from Jimmy Foss, who belted his fifteenth homer of the year in the eighth.

In the second game Denny Galehouse held Detroit to four hits, one less than Boston obtained.

New York, July 16 (AP)—The pace of the New York Yankees' scalping of the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 2, and 8 to 3, in a doubleheader here today, was three runs in the first inning in each contest.

A crowd of 63,664 fans looked on as the Yankees' lefty pitcher, Lou Gehrig, pitched a complete game, fanning five while his teammates were hit by a like number of hits off Indian hurlers, southpaw Benat, and Al Milnar and righty pitcher, Eddie Foy.

Russo, Rookie Yankee, gave the Thibe only six hits in the nightcap as Eisenstat, who again saw service along with Harder, who started and pitched a three-run attack in the first inning.

The Yankees' six-game hold in the American League led to a second-place Boston Red Sox, who also captured two from the Yankees.

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—The Chicago White Sox stored away some third place security today by sweeping to a double-header victory over Washington, 3 to 2 and 6 to 3, before 15,000.

Ted Lyons turned in his ninth victory against two defeats in the opener when a bobble by Buddy Myer, Washington second baseman, paved the way for Mike Kreevich, who had tripled in the tying run, to score the edge.

Kreevich's homer and Gee Walker's four singles helped Lefty Thornton Lee to his seventh victory in the nightcap.

The Sports Trail

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Pitch Hitting for Whitney Martin)

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—The story began in Chicago's ghetto district 10 years ago.

It all but ended the other night in a Texas town named Lubbock.

King Levinsky, the "Kingfish," who earned a fortune of $350,000 during four spectacular years in the ring, was knocked out in a couple of rounds by an unknown for a mere pittance.

Today, at the age of 29, Levinsky is broke. The man who fought champions and former champions hasn't got change for a herring, as they say on Maxwell street.

At 19, Levinsky was a husky, 190-pound youngster selling fish. The lure of quick money attracted him to boxing.

Levinsky's earning power lifted his family out of the Maxwell street district—the ghetto—into business ventures. Generosity to his brothers, sisters and his parents broke him. They all dipped into his ring winnings until his pile vanished.

At the height of his career he fought them all—Primo Carnera twice, Jack Sharkey, Max Baer three times, Tommy Loughran three times, Jimmy Slattery twice, Maxie Rosenbloom, Mickey Walker, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis. His courage never deserted him until one night four years ago when he was going into the ring to face Louis.

The Kingfish was in such a mental state that the starting time had to be advanced so they could get Levinsky into the ring with some semblance of poise. After Louis threw a few punches, Levinsky sat on the bottom rope and pleaded with the referee that he had had enough.

In fighting Baer the third time he had too much courage. In the second round Levinsky attempting to win the admiration of the crowd, beckoned Baer to "come in and fight." Baer did. He threw one terrific right that caught Levinsky on the jaw, knocking him out for the first time in his career.

Levinsky was the cause of Jack Dempsey hanging up his gloves, even for exhibition purposes. The King fought the old Manassa Mauler in the Chicago stadium in 1932 when Dempsey was suffering from a cold and fever. The four-round exhibition drew 23,000 spectators, with a $15,000 gate, and Dempsey, far from his usual physical condition, was mauled.

Levinsky's sister, "Leaping Lena," quit selling fish and vaulted into the limelight by becoming the King's manager, ostensibly to protect his financial interests.

"Nobody ever hurt me except Baer," he said. "I was still going the next day. He was the toughest puncher."

Goofy is right. The next day, meeting a friend on the street he asked:

"How did I do last night?"

Levinsky, now weighing 250 pounds, is at the end of a colorful career, his ring fortune of $350,000 gone to the four winds.

St. Louis, July 16 (AP)—Fred Haney's St. Louis Browns trimmed Philadelphia, 13 to 7, in the first game today then battled uphill to gain a 5-5 deadlock in the nightcap, called because of darkness at the end of 12 innings.

The Athletics grabbed a 5-0 lead in the first two innings of the second game, but the Browns counted once in the eighth and three times in the ninth to tie it up.

Henry Phippen held St. Louis to two hits for seven innings but Chet Laabs' homer with one on in the ninth knocked him out.

"Hot" Horses in the Entry Lists Today At the Major Tracks

Here are some "hot" horses called from the observations of trackmen at several of the major tracks, which we find in the entry lists of today's races.

Maybe they will and maybe they won't be as "hot" today as last in the week, and maybe they're not as "hot" now or ever as steamed up to be. Where there are several "hot" horses in the same race, you separate them! Maybe they're all hot; maybe they'll run a dead heat. We're laying off them.

That's another trouble with this horse race racket. It has more "hops" than an asparagus patch. Here's the list and we hope your ship comes home. . . without a list to the leeward. . . which means we hope you're not "light" on one side.

Owners Prepare To Ship Jumpers To Fairgo Track

Round Bend Holding Steeplechase Record at Bel Air, To Run Here

W. J. Daly's Round Bend, who holds the two-mile steeplechase record at Bel Air, will be one of the 50 leapers who will be campaigned during the Cumberland Fair Association's 10-day meeting, beginning August 8.

Word to that effect was wired today from Bel Air, Md., by Owner-Trainer J. Daly, who will also ride his jumper during the sport here.

Louis C. Leith of Middleburg, Va., one of America's foremost steeplechase trainers, wired President-General Manager Harry A. Manley that he was shipping King Dominant, Tolson and Winton, all recently converted jumpers, here for the 10-day races.

J. Bowes Bond, Ed Ferry, Johnny Harris and John Bosley are other trainers of steeplechase horses, who will send strings here. They will also campaign numerous flat runners which makes their chances of being the leading winning trainer of the meeting, decidedly bright.

When completed, the steeplechase course will be the finest gracing a half-mile track in America. It is undecided at present just how many horses will be allowed to start in steeplechase races. However, President Manley will see to it that every jumper shipped here will get an opportunity to strive for purses.

Greg Johnson, who is doing missionary work at Bel Air for the forthcoming season, wired today that 400 horses will be shipped August 5, when G. Ray Bryson's meeting ends there.

In the Bel Air contingent will be numerous winners this year over the mile tracks of New York, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Ohio, California and New Orleans.

Jose Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room here, who serves a similar position at Bel Air, plied President Manley that between 30 and 40 jockeys would be on to accept mounts. Among them will be ten lads who will be riding here for the first time.

"He's out after winners and will take chances to get them."

We recall for "Main Stem" the little ditty of the colored mother "Honey, You Stay In Your Own Back Yard." Race tracks and things about them ain't nothing for the local page, until the local races!

Giants Peaceful As They Bow to St. Louis 3 to 1

Medwick Steals Home as Cliff Melton Held on to the Ball

New York, July 16. (AP)—The New York Giants practically bent over backwards to prevent a repetition of yesterday's wholesale banishment as they bowed to the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of their series 3-1 today.

Morton Cooper bested Cliff Melton and Walter Brown in a dull mound duel.

A steal of home by Joe Medwick, while Melton hung onto the ball, featured the battle.

At 19, Levinsky was a husky, 190-pound youngster selling fire. The lure of quick money attracted him
to boxing.

Levinsky's earning power lifted his family out of the Maxwell street district—the ghetto—into business ventures. Generosity to his brothers, sisters and his parents broke him. They all dipped into his ring winnings until his pile vanished.

At the height of his career he fought them all—Primo Carnera twice, Jack Sharkey, Max Baer three times, Tommy Loughran three times, Jimmy Slattery twice, Maxie Rosenbloom, Mickey Walker, Jack
Dempsy and Joe Louis. His courage never deserted him until one night four years ago when he was going into the ring to face Louis.

The Kingfish was in such a mental state that the starting time had to be advanced so they could get Levinsky into the ring with some semblance of poise. After Louis threw a few punches, Levinsky sat on the bottom rope and pleaded with the referee that he had had enough.

In fighting Baer the third time he had too much courage. In the second round Levinsky attempting to win the admiration of the crowd, beckoned Baer to "come in and fight." Baer did. "He threw one terrific right that caught Levinsky on the jaw, knocking him out for the first time in his career.

Levinsky was the cause of Jack Dempsy hanging up his gloves, even for exhibition purposes. The King fought the old Manassa Mauler in the Chicago stadium in 1932 when Dempsy was suffering from a cold and fever. The four-round exhibition drew 23,000 spectators, with a $15,000 gate, and Dempsy, far from his usual physical condition, was mauled.

Levinsky's sister, "Leaping Lena," quit selling fish and vaulted into the limelight by becoming the King's manager, ostensibly to protect his financial interests.

"Nobody ever hurt me except Baer," he said. "I was still going the next day. He was the toughest puncher."

Goofy is right. The next day, meeting a friend on the street he asked:
"How did I do last night?"
Levinsky, now weighing 250 pounds, is at the end of a colorful career, his ring fortune of $350,000 gone to the four winds.

St. Louis, July 16. (AP)—Fred
Hanev's St. Louis Browns trimmed
Philadelphia, 13 to 7, in the first game today then battled uphill to gain a 5-5 deadlock in the nightcap, called because of darkness at the end of 12 innings.

The SPORT TRAIL

(Pinch Hitting for Whitney Martin)

Chicago, July 6. (AP)—The story began in Chicago's ghetto district 10 years ago.

It all ended the other night in a Texas town named Lubbock.
King Levinsky, the "Kingfish," who earned a fortune of $350,000 during four spectacular years in the ring, was knocked out in a couple of rounds by an unknown for a mere pittance.

Today, at the age of 29, Levinsky is broke. The man who fought champions and former champions hasn't got change for a herring, as they say on Maxwell street.

At 19, Levinsky was a husky, 190-pound youngster selling fire. The lure of quick money attracted him
to boxing.

Brooklyn and Chicago Split In Doubleheader

Cubs Win First Game 9 to 2 and Dodgers Take
Second 4 to 0

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 16. (AP)— Knocked out of third place when the Chicago Cubs gained a 9 to 2 victory in the first game of a doubleheader today, the Dodgers bounced back in the afterpiece and scored a 4 to 0 decision to regain their position.

Van Mungo started the second game but was removed in the third inning because of wildness. Red Evans pitched shutout ball the rest of the way to gain his first decision of the season.

Flintstone Rallies To Defeat Paw Paw Nine 6-5
Flintstone, Md., July 16.—The Paw Paw Boosters of the Tri-
County League held the Flintstone Athletics in check for five innings yesterday with a fine display of fielding but the A's tied it up in the last of the seventh and a Garrison finish in the last of the ninth saw three runs and the game came to Flintstone on 3 hits, a hit batsman and a fielder's choice.

A. Mauzy started the rally with a single. Dolly was hit by a pitched ball, Clingerman singled and went to second on a fielder's choice. A Mauzy scoring. With Dolly on third and Clingerman on second Carl Mauzy strode to the plate and smacked a single to score both runners, and the game was over with no one out in the inning.

runners stranded with tight defensive play but blew up just as victory was in their grasp. For of the A's struck out eight Boosters to keep his team without hailing distance of victory.

At the TRACKS

"Hot" Horses in the Entry Lists Today
At the Major Tracks

Here are some "hot" horses called from the observations of trackmen at several of the major tracks, which we find in the entry lists of today's races.

Maybe they will and maybe they won't be as "hot" today as later in the week, and maybe they're not as "hot" now or ever as steamed up to be. Where there are several "hot" horses in the same race, you separate them! Maybe they're all hot; maybe they'll run a dead heat.
We're laying off them.

That's another trouble with this horse race racket. It has more
"hops" than an asparagus patch.

Here's the list and we hope your ship comes home. . . without a list to the leeward. . . which means we hope you're not "light" on one side.

"Main Stem" Wanders On a Race Course and Runs Afoul A Foul

It's not pleasant spanking children, even if it's merely a "brain-child," so we hesitate to call to task "Winding Up The Main Stem" for a spasm in its Sunday issue about horses and horse race betting. But the baby was wrong and on two counts.

First of all, where did you find time to be figuring out a "sure winner" in any afternoon race, honey? That takes time, and time is what must be devoted to duty, Smack!

Then, darling, you were no more certain of your facts as to what happened to your horse, Captain James, in the sixth at Empire City Friday, as you say you were sure he was a "sure winner."

Nothing happened to Captain James except what might happen to any horse in any race as long as they have jockeys riding horses.
That aside from the thousand and one other things that can happen to a horse in a horse race.

Without personally going into your guess as to what happened to your "sure winner" we glean this from an account of the race by a scribe who saw it, and who took occasion to use the occurrence to bring to light Don Meade's battle to the winning jockeys since he was reinstated after several years on the ground.

Here it is:
"Friday at Empire Meade got into trouble again and almost caused an accident x x x x."
"Meade was riding Count
Maurice and Dotter was on Captain James. Count Maurice had been leading and Dotter tried to push his mount between Count Maurice and Copper Tube coming into the stretch. Meade wouldn't give ground and Captain James was bumped and Dotter took a header.

"Meade, of course, had his mount disqualified, but nothing seems to daunt the strong armed rider."
"He's out after winners and will take chances to get them."

We recall for "Main Stem" the little ditty of the colored mother
"Honey, You Stay In Your Own Back Yard." Race tracks and things about them ain't nothing for the local page, until the local races.

Round Bend Holding Steeplechase Record at
Bel Air, To Run Here

W. J. Daly's Round Bend, who holds the two-mile steeplechase record at Bel Air, will be one of the 50 leapers who will be campaigning during the Cumberland Fair Association's 10-day meeting, beginning August 8.

Word to that effect was wired today from Bel Air, Md., by Owner-Trainer Dady, who will also ride his jumper during the sport here.

Louis C. Leith of Middleburg, Va., one of America's foremost steeplechase trainers, wired President-General Manager Harry A. Manley that he was shipping King Dominant, Tolson and Wintona, all recently converted jumpers, here for the 10-day's racing.

J. Bowes Bond, Ed Perry, Johnny
Harris and John Bosley are other trainers of steeplechase horses, who will send strings here. They will campaign numerous fast runners which makes their chances of being the leading winning trainer of the meeting, decidedly bright.

When completed, the steeplechase course will be the finest gracing a half-mile track in America. It is undecided at present just how many horses will be allowed to start in steeplechase races. However, President Manley will see to it that every jumper shipped here for purposes of the season, will get an opportunity to strive for prizes.

Greg Johnston, who is doing missionary work at Bel Air for the forthcoming season, wired today that 400 horses will be shipped Aug-

Savage River Dam Okayed by FDR, Columnists Claim

'Matter Clinched' After Byron Talk, Say Pearson, Allen

The Savage River Dam, approval of which has been looked for here momentarily, has won President Roosevelt's okay—maybe.

Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, in yesterday's edition of their "Maryland Merry-Go-Round," gave that impression without actually saying so.

They wrote that after the measure providing for the big dam was approved by the Budget Bureau and sent to the White House, Congressman William D. Byron "went to see Roosevelt last Wednesday and reminded him that during the 1936 campaign he had stood on the rear of his car in Cumberland and promised Potomac River development to the people of Western Maryland."

"This clinched the matter," the columnists concluded, adding nothing of a more definite nature. Neither Congressman Byron nor other Washington sources could be reached yesterday to confirm the statement.

Crash Driver Held On Four Charges

South End Man Fled After Wreck, Cops Say

Four motor vehicle charges faced a South Cumberland man today as a result of an automobile accident on Winose street Saturday night.

John H. Rickenburg, of 320 Arch street, was charged with drunken and reckless driving, failing to stop after an accident, and driving a car without an operator's license.

Police said Rickenburg fled from the scene after the car he was driving crashed into a telephone pole, near the subway, and overturned. City Officers James J. Condon, John G. Powers and Curtis M. Kime and State Trooper George J. Miller investigated.

George Collins, 23, of RFD 4, an occupant of the crash car, suffered a broken left arm and multiple lacerations and bruises. He was admitted to Memorial hospital after the accident and released last night.

Officers said Collins identified Rickenburg as driver of the machine when it crashed.

"Rickenburg admitted he was drunk and said he didn't know why he fled after the mishap," Assistant Chief John J. Treiber said last night.

Grantville Farmers To Discuss Co-Op Plan At Meeting Wednesday

A committee of farmers of the Grantville community will meet at the National hotel, Grantville, Wednesday evening to review the principles of a cooperative fertilizer program, according to a weekend announcement.

The meeting is to be under the auspices of Southern States Cooperative and will be conducted by Max F. Borden, Baltimore, assistant manager of Southern States Fertilizer Service.

Under the cooperative plan, farmers obtain their fertilizer requirements at cost. This cooperative service has grown very rapidly in popularity in Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia, where farmers of more than 250 communities have adopted the plan. Through obtaining their fertilizer cooperatively farmers of the communities have found they obtain quality fertilizer at lower cost, Mr. Borden declared.

In addition to the local cooperative agency at Grantville, William Winterberg, Charles Reichenbecker, Norman Patton, August Hanff, Albert Camp, Ernest Bowser and J. A. Beady are assisting in promoting the cooperative farm program which is being developed in the community.

Westernport Man Trapshooting Champ

Baltimore, July 16 (AP)—J. C. Michael, Aberdeen, won the Maryland state trapshooting title when he broke 196 clay pigeons in 200 tries today.

Tony F. Francis, Westernport, scored 192x200 for second place.

C. J. Renner, a Delaware blue-rocker, hung up 196x200 for class A honors. E. H. McDonald, Headsville, Pa., had 194x200 for second place.

Francis, had 192x200 for class B trophy. T. J. Young was second, one pigeon behind.

B. W. Sparenburg, Baltimore, was the class C winner with 183x200. G. A. Bratt Jr., 181x200, was second.

T. B. Lambert, Dandalk, had 173x200 for class C tops. M. Kamp, Baltimore, tied with him in the regular match, but lost the shootoff.

Francis won the all-around championship with 317x350.

Driver Arrested

Rutherford B. Cross of RFD 3, was arrested yesterday afternoon on the West Side by Officers R. C. Cassen and L. L. Youngblood for careless driving. He is scheduled to be given a hearing this morning in Police court.

Paul V. McNutt and George E. Scott

Judges Named for Annual Dog Show Of Western Maryland Kennel Club

Plans for the eighth annual American Kennel Club-licensed all-breed dog show of the Western Maryland Kennel Club neared completion today as judges and officials for the event were named in a week-end announcement.

The show, to be held Sunday, August 6, at the Cumberland Fairgrounds for the benefit of the Western Maryland Wildlife Foundation, will be under the supervision of E. W. Leach, AKC-licensed superintendent of St. Paul, Minn.

Comprising the bench show committee are Clifford D. Jeffries, chairman; J. George Smith, Fred Duke, Earl S. Wilson, R. J. Newman, A. G. Ramey, Mrs. Fred Duke, H. G. Stein, and Mrs. J. Wesley Kelley.

The show will officially open at 9 a. m. August 6 and continue throughout the day and evening until "best dog in show" has been chosen. It is expected that this finale will be reached about 9:30 p. m.

In accordance with AKC rules, all entries must be in the hands of the superintendent not later than midnight, Saturday, July 29.

Louis Walther of Pittsburgh, will judge Brittany spaniels, Chesapeake Bays, German shorthaired pointers, wire-haired pointers, pointers, retrievers (curly or flat coated, golden and Labrador), Gordon setters, spaniels (Cocker, English Springer, field, Irish water, Sussex, Welsh Springer), Afghan hounds, Basset hounds, bloodhounds, Borzoi, Dachshunds, deerhounds (Scottish), foxhounds (English), greyhounds, harriers, Norwegian elkhounds, otterhounds, Salukis, Whippets, Irish wolfhounds, Affenpinschers, Chihuahuas, English toy spaniels, Brussels griffons, Italian greyhounds, Japanese spaniels, Maltese, Mexican hairless, Papillons, Pekinese, miniature Pinschers, Pomeranians, pugs, toy Manchester terriers, toy poodles, Yorkshire terriers, bulldogs and French bulldogs.

D. P. Tyson of Baltimore will have charge of English setters; Charles M. Canedy of Baltimore, Irish setters; Jack Rowe, Fostoria, Ohio, cocker spaniels and English cocker spaniels; Henry Seibold of New Philadelphia, Ohio, beagles; John H. Musgat, Shadyside, Ohio, Boston terriers; Gerald Kahn, Youngstown, Ohio, Chow Chows, and Miss Mabel Pyle, Oakland, Pa., children's handling classes.

Matt Korshin of Media, Pa., will judge Alaskan malamutes, Belgian sheepdogs, Bernese mountain dogs, Bouvier de Flandres, boxers, Briards, bull mastiffs, collies, Eskimos, German shepherd dogs, Great Danes, Great Pyrenees, Komondors, Kuvasz, mastiffs, Newfoundlanders, Old English sheepdogs, Doberman Pinschers, Puli, Rottweilers, Samoyeds, giant Schnauzers, Shetland sheepdogs, Siberian huskies, St. Bernards, Welsh Corgis, Airedale terriers, Bedlington terriers, border terriers, bull terriers, Cairn terriers, Dandie Dinmont terriers, fox terriers (smooth and wire), Irish terriers, Kerry Blue terriers, Lakeland terriers, Lhasa terriers, Manchester terriers, Norwich terriers, miniature Schnauzers, standard Schnauzers, Scottish terriers, Sealyham terriers, St. Georges, West Highland white terriers, Dalmatians, Keeshonden, Poodles and Schipperkes.

The regular classes for each breed are: Puppy (over six months and less than 12 months), novice (over six months and never a winner previously), American-bred (whelped in United States), limit (dogs that have not won this class six times) and open (dogs regardless of age or previous wins).

The winners' class is open to undefeated dogs of same sex which have won first in any of the regular classes. The field trial classes will be open to sporting dogs that have been entered in recognized field trials. The children's handling classes will be judged on the handling of dogs, regardless of the animal's qualities.

By late afternoon, the best of breed in each breed will have been selected and these dogs will enter into competition for group prizes. The groups follow:

Sporting dogs — Pointer, setter, Irish setter, judged by Louis Walther.

Hounds—Beagle, bloodhound, foxhound, judged by Louis Walther.

Working dogs — Collie, German Shepherd, Boxer, judged by Matt Korshin.

Toys—Chihuahua, Pekinese, Pomeranian, judged by Louis Walther.

Non-sporting — Boston, bulldog, Chow Chow, judged by Matt Korshin.

The six dogs that win in the above groups will capture trophies and ribbon rosettes and compete for the title, "best dog in show." The best in show winner, to be selected by Louis Walther, will take the President Harry A. Manley trophy.

Show veterinarians include Dr. W. R. Teeter, Cumberland; Dr. R. O. Christopher, Romney, W. Va.; and Dr. A. G. Livengood, Salisbury, Pa.

Officers of the Western Maryland Kennel Club directing the show are Harry A. Manley, president; Clifford D. Jeffries, vice-president; J. George Smith, treasurer; and J. Wesley Kelley, secretary.

Premium lists and entry blanks may be obtained by addressing Superintendent E. W. Leach at the Port Cumberland hotel or Secretary J. Wesley Kelley, Post Office Box 582, Cumberland.

NYA Trade School Is Planned Here; County Quota Up

Union Street School Sought for Project Quota Jumps to 700

Establishment of a trade school project in Cumberland for unemployed youth loomed today on the heels of an announcement that the National Youth Administration quota for Allegheny county has been more than doubled.

County Supervisor E. Price Steiding said last night that an effort is being made to obtain the abandoned Union Street school for the project. Mr. Steiding and District NYA Supervisor Carlton C. Schuller, of Hagerstown will inspect the building today, accompanied by School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp.

It is hoped that school officials will consent to the use of the building by the NYA, Mr. Steiding said.

To Include Cabinet-Making

The project will include cabinet-making and furniture manufacture, according to Mr. Steiding—a project similar to the one already in operation in Lonaconing. If the Union street site is made available, the girls' project will probably be transferred from City Hall and expanded to include various handicrafts, such as reed-craft, chair-caning, and upholstery, the county supervisor said. At present, the girls' project is devoted principally to sewing.

Allegheny county's NYA quota has been more than doubled as a result of the increased funds voted by Congress, Mr. Steiding announced. Although official figures are not yet available, Mr. Steiding said the quota had been jumped from 350 to about 700.

Regulations governing the NYA have been changed, he pointed out, and relief is no longer a paramount requirement.

Young persons of both sexes between the ages of 18 and 24, inclusive, are eligible for NYA aid. From $16 to $24 can be earned monthly for fifty hours work.

125 Applications Filed

Mr. Steiding said that approximately 125 applications were filed at Lonaconing Saturday, and that many more are expected there and at Cumberland.

Boys and young men living east of Eckhart should apply to Harry L. Smith, 814 Stewart avenue, between 1 and 4 p. m. and between 5 and 7 p. m., with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays.

Girls and young women should apply to Mrs. Teresa Coleman in the basement of City Hall between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays.

Applicants residing in other sections of the county are to contact Mr. Steiding at Lonaconing.

No Driver's License, Man Draws $10 Fine

Clarence O. Maury, of Flintstone, was fined $10 and costs Saturday in Trial Magistrate's court on a charge of operating a car without a license. He was apprehended Friday on the Baltimore Turnpike, near Flintstone, by State Police Sgt. James T. Knight.

In Police court, Edwin Lewis, 222 Grand avenue, was fined $10 and Hugh W. Moses, of Lonaconing, was fined $5 for careless driving on the West Side. Both were arrested by Officers R. C. Cassen and L. L. Youngblood.

The assignments were the first personnel changes made by Commissioner Manley since he was appointed to the position several weeks ago. It was vacated by Harry Irvine, now mayor.

All the assignments became effective at 1 a. m. this morning.

Hospital and Nursery Heads Leave Cumberland Today for New Posts

Cumberland loses today the heads of two of its important institutions as the Sisters of Charity announce the transfer of the superintendents of Allegheny hospital and the Keating Memorial Day Nursery.

Sister Fidelis, R. N., superintendent of Allegheny hospital almost twenty years, and Sister Agnes, superintendent of the Day Nursery for six years, will leave Cumberland and their positions at noon today for St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, Md., where they will be assigned to new posts.

Sister Fidelis came to Cumberland from Norfolk, Va., in December, 1913, two years after the religious order opened the hospital. She had been appointed superintendent of the Decatur street institution.

In June, 1927, Sister Fidelis was ordered to Carney hospital, Boston, where she was superintendent for two years. She was then transferred to St. Vincent's hospital, Bridgeport, Conn., where she remained in charge for five years.

Sister Fidelis returned to Cumberland in August, 1934. Since then the hospital has increased extensively in modern improvements and up-to-date equipment. It was largely through her efforts that the new addition to the hospital was undertaken and completed several years ago. Approximately 80,000 persons from Cumberland, nearby towns and cities, and far-off states, have been given medical aid at the hospital since it opened twenty-eight years ago, it was said last night.

Nursery Grows

Sister Agnes came here in 1933 from Providence hospital, Washington, D. C. During her stay here the nursery, too, has become one of Cumberland's important institutions.

Sister Agnes last night expressed her "sincere appreciation and thanks to all Cumberland residents who have played a part in helping to make the nursery what it is today."

Appointment of successors to both Cumberland posts will come from Emmitsburg, where the Sisters of Charity have their Central House of the Eastern Province of the United States, under the original name of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

Pilot's Aim Is Sure As Junior Association Greets Hancock Hosts

The occasion was the annual outing sponsored by the Hancock organization at Cacapon State Park, near Berkeley Springs, W. Va. Headed by President L. Leslie Helmer, a delegation of about thirty from Cumberland attended, along with some 250 representatives of junior chambers from Maryland, West Virginia, and Virginia.

In addition to attending the event, however, the Cumberland organization sent a plane piloted by Capt. Randolph Millholland Jr., to drop a greeting to the hosts. In the plane with Millholland was William B. Rannels.

The aim was perfect. The miniature parachute bearing the message landed only a short distance from the Hancock headquarters at Cacapon Inn.—Which wasn't bad, Cumberland delegates noted, in view of the fact that the park covers some fifteen square miles.

The message, besides extending greetings, also invited members of the group to attend the Cumberland organization's charter presentation ceremony August 12.

Wright To Do Mate For Nude "Adam"

London, July 16 (AP)—Lawrence Wright, song composer and publisher, has commissioned Sculptor Jacob Epstein, whose works have a way of stirring up art controversies, to do a mate for his massive nude "Adam," which Wright is exhibiting at Blackpool, seaside resort.

Wright said Epstein would hew out an "Eve" for about $70,500 and that it would be shown at Blackpool next summer.

Transportation Bill Endorsed by Carey

Washington, July 16 (AP)—Transportation legislation pending in the House was endorsed today by W. Gibson Carey, Jr., president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In a communication to chamber members, Carey said the legislation, which would bring water carriers under the same federal regulation as railroad and trucking companies, was "in the main consistent with the chamber's position on transportation."

Savage River Dam Okayed by FDR, Columnists Claim

'Matter Clinched' After Byron Talk, Say Pearson, Allen

The Savage River Dam, approval of which has been looked for here momentarily, has won President Roosevelt's okay—maybe.

Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, in yesterday's edition of their "Maryland Merry-Go-Round," gave that impression without actually saying so.

They wrote that after the measure providing for the big dam was approved by the Budget Bureau and sent to the White House, Congressman William D. Byron "went to see Roosevelt last Wednesday and reminded him that during the 1936 campaign he had stood on the rear of his car in Cumberland and promised Potomac River development to the people of Western Maryland."

"This clinched the matter," the columnists concluded, adding nothing of a more definite nature.

Neither Congressman Byron nor other Washington sources could be reached yesterday to confirm the statement.

Crash Driver Held On Four Charges

South End Man Fled After Wreck, Cops Say

Four motor vehicle charges faced a South Cumberland man today as a result of an automobile accident on Winnow street Saturday night.

John H. Rickenburg, of 320 Arch street, was charged with drunken and reckless driving, failing to stop after an accident, and driving a car without an operator's license.

Police said Rickenburg fled from the scene after the car he was driving crashed into a telephone pole, near the subway, and overturned.

City Officers James J. Condon, John G. Powers and Curtis M. Kime and State Trooper George J. Miller investigated.

George Collins, 23, of RFD 4, an occupant of the crash car, suffered a broken left arm and multiple lacerations and bruises. He was admitted to Memorial hospital after the accident and released last night.

Officers said Collins identified Rickenburg as driver of the machine when it crashed.

"Rickenburg admitted he was drunk and said he didn't know why he fled after the mishap," Assistant Chief John J. Treiber said last night.

Grantsville Farmers To Discuss Co-Op Plan At Meeting Wednesday

A committee of farmers of the Grantsville community will meet at the National hotel, Grantsville, Wednesday evening to review the principles of a cooperative fertilizer program, according to a weekend announcement.

The meeting is to be under the auspices of Southern States Cooperative and will be conducted by Max F. Borden, Baltimore, assistant manager of Southern States Fertilizer Service.

Under the cooperative plan, farmers obtain their fertilizer requirements at cost. This cooperative service has grown very rapidly in popularity in Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia, where farmers of more than 250 communities have adopted the plan.

Through obtaining their fertilizer cooperatively farmers of the communities have found they obtain quality fertilizer at lower cost, Mr. Borden declared.

In addition to the local cooperative agency at Grantsville, William Winterberg, Charles Reichenbecker, Norman Patton, August Hanf, Albert Camp, Ernest Bowser and J. A. Bedy are assisting in promoting the cooperative farm program which is being developed in the community.

County Supervisor E. Price Steiding said last night that an effort is being made to obtain the abandoned Union Street school for the project. Mr. Steiding and District NYA Supervisor Carlton C. Schuler, of Hagerstown will inspect the building today, accompanied by School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp.

It is hoped that school officials will consent to the use of the building by the NYA, Mr. Steiding said.

To Include Cabinet-Making

The project will include cabinet-making and furniture manufacture, according to Mr. Steiding—a project similar to the one already in operation in Lonaconing. If the Union street site is made available, the girls' project will probably be transferred from City Hall and expanded to include various handicrafts, such as reed-craft, chair-caning, and upholstering, the county supervisor said.

At present, the girls' project is devoted principally to sewing. Allegheny county's NYA quota has been more than doubled as a result of the increased funds voted by Congress, Mr. Steiding announced.

Although official figures are not yet available, Mr. Steiding said the quota had been jumped from 350 to about 700.

Regulations governing the NYA have been changed, he pointed out, and relief is no longer a paramount requirement.

Young persons of both sexes between the ages of 18 and 24, inclusive, are eligible for NYA aid. From $16 to $24 can be earned monthly for fifty hours work.

125 Applications Filed

Mr. Steiding said that approximately 125 applications were filed at Lonaconing Saturday, and that many more are expected there and at Cumberland.

Boys and young men living east of Eckhart should apply to Harry L. Smith, 814 Stewart avenue, between 1 and 4 p. m. and between 5 and 7 p. m., with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays.

Girls and young women should apply to Mrs. Teresa Coleman in the basement of City Hall between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays.

Applicants residing in other sections of the county are to contact Mr. Steiding at Lonaconing.

No Driver's License, Man Draws $10 Fine

Clarence O. Maury, of Flintstone, was fined $10 and costs Saturday in Trial Magistrate's court on a charge of operating a car without a license. He was apprehended Friday on the Baltimore Turnpike, near Flintstone, by State Police Sgt. James T. Knight.

In Police court, Edwin Lewis, 222 Grand avenue, was fined $10 and Hugh W. Moses, of Lonaconing, was fined $5 for careless driving on the West Side. Both were arrested by Officers R. C. Cassen and L. L. Youngblood.

Daughters of America To Install Officers

Officers will be installed by Pride of Allegheny Council No. 10, Daughters of America, at its regular meeting at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at Junior Order hall, Park street. They will be inducted by Deputy Maude Kirk of Pride of Barton Council No. 77. Refreshments will be served.

Wright To Do Male For Nude "Adam"

London, July 16 (AP)—Lawrence Wright, song composer and publisher, has commissioned sculptor Jacob Epstein, whose works have a way of stirring up art controversies, to do a male for his massive nude "Adam," which Wright is exhibiting at Blackpool, seaside resort.

Wright said Epstein would hew out an "Eve" for about $70,500 and that it would be shown at Blackpool next summer.

Hospital and Nursery Heads Leave Cumberland Today for New Posts

Cumberland loses today the heads of two of its important institutions as the Sisters of Charity announce the transfer of the superintendents of Allegheny hospital and the Keating Memorial Day Nursery.

Sister Fidelis, R. N., superintendent of Allegheny hospital almost twenty years, and Sister Agnes, superintendent of the Day Nursery for six years, will leave Cumberland and their positions at noon today for St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, Md., where they will be assigned to new posts.

Sister Fidelis came to Cumberland from Norfolk, Va., in December, 1913, two years after the religious order opened the hospital. She had been appointed superintendent of the Decatur street institution.

Served in Boston

In June, 1927, Sister Fidelis was ordered to Carney hospital, Boston, where she was superintendent for two years. She was then transferred to St. Vincent's hospital, Bridgeport, Conn., where she remained in charge for five years.

Sister Fidelis returned to Cumberland in August, 1934. Since then the hospital has increased extensively in modern improvements and up-to-date equipment. It was largely through her efforts that the new addition to the hospital was undertaken and completed several years ago.

Approximately 80,000 persons from Cumberland, nearby towns and cities, and far-off states, have been given medical aid at the hospital since it opened twenty-eight years ago, it was said last night.

Nursery Grows

Sister Agnes came here in 1933 from Providence hospital, Washington, D. C. During her stay here the nursery, too, has become one of Cumberland's important institutions.

Sister Agnes last night expressed her "sincere appreciation and thanks to all Cumberland residents who have played a part in helping to make the nursery what it is today."

Appointment of successors to both Cumberland posts will come from Emmitsburg, where the Sisters of Charity have their Central House of the Eastern Province of the United States, under the original name of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

Pilot's Aim Is Sure As Junior Association Greets Hancock Hosts

A message from the air was the novel greeting extended by the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce to the Hancock Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday. And the greeting hit home, too.

Headed by President L. Leslie Helmer, a delegation of about thirty from Cumberland attended, along with some 250 representatives of junior chambers from Maryland, West Virginia, and Virginia.

In addition to attending the event, however, the Cumberland organization sent a plane piloted by Capt. Randolph Millholland Jr., to drop a greeting to the hosts. In the plane with Millholland was William B. Rannels.

The aim was perfect. The miniature parachute bearing the message landed only a short distance from the Hancock headquarters at Cacapon Inn—which wasn't bad. Cumberland delegates noted, in view of the fact that the park covers some fifteen square miles.

The message, besides extending greetings, also invited members of the group to attend the Cumberland organization's charter presentation ceremony August 12.
